California's Decision
Railroad's Ride Hard
Austria for Italy
Finding New Men

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922, by Star Co.

Next Tuesday, California, voting at the primaries will tell what she thinks of Hiram Johnson.

To people living in the East, especially at the national capital, the fact that Wall street newspapers predict Johnson's defeat is puzzling. Usually such newspapers are well-informed, and they assert positively "plans are complete to get rid of Johnson."

California must be consulted in that matter, however, and that California men and women should vote to take Hiram Johnson out of the Senate seems about as probable as a vote to cut down all the redwood trees, or exchange the California climate for that of Nova Scotia.

In the East Hiram Johnson has been criticised for his hard fight —which he won—to get high protection for California's products, fruit, almonds, etc. But in fighting for California he fought for the whole country, interested in the prosperity of the magnificent Pacific State. In any case his tariff work surely will not hurt him with Californians.

A State does not readily destroy what adds to its credit and standing among all the States. Forty-seven States outside of California know of Hiram Johnson as well as California knows of Niagara Falls.

Of 96 men in the Senate, how many are known to all the States? Not half a dozen. And Hiram Johnson is most widely known of them all. A born Californian, Hiram Johnson so impressed the nation before the last national campaign that his nomination would have been certain, had the people voted for the Presidential nominee.

The things that he undertook in California, when he was Governor, went through. He proved himself more powerful than the corporations, but just to them and to all.

Senator Johnson is a fighter, sincere, courageous, democratic, loyal. No man could better represent the spirit of California. That his fellow citizens should retire him in favor of an estimable, handsome gentleman whom the rest of the country never heard of, and never would hear of, is unthinkable to any one that has traveled through California, a thousand miles north and south, studying the people and their intense loyalty to everything truly Californian.

Next Tuesday will tell how much Wall Street knows about California men and women and their loyalty to their own friends.

Railroad owners vote 254 to 4 in favor of taking from the men their seniority rights, which means depriving them of their property. That is foolish work for railroad owners, whose status depends on the public will. If one day the workers should vote to take away their railroads, they would not like it.

But workers as a class are more honest than corporation owners.

In rejecting seniority the railroads flout President Harding, who has said truly that the men were entitled to seniority rights acquired. How will the President accept the snub from the railroads? They think they own the administration, and, in their own language, "Can ride it as hard as they like." We'll know about that when the dust settles. The President CAN, if he chooses, end both coal and railroad strikes. Roosevelt would do it, and the railroads would not snub HIM. He knew what power a President has, and used it.

There is talk of Italy annexing Austria, running the country under some sort of protectorate. It would not be a bad idea if Austria were willing, although a combination of Germany and what is left of Austria would seem the natural thing. Vienna stands like a cow with her pasture taken away, nothing to live on.

The Italians, if Austria consented, would give her good government. And old hatreds would soon be wiped out, with the Hapsburgs gone. In days past ancestors of today's Italians owned, governed and built roads all through Austria.

It is not as easy as it seems to replace experienced workers, and be "independent of your employes." The New Jersey Central road, looking for substitute workers found 8,400 candidates out of 10,000 utterly worthless.

The fact is that self-respecting workers will not take the places of men striking against lower wages has, of course, something to do with the low quality of men looking for other men's jobs.

Senator Stirling of South Dakota introduced a bill that would make the crime murder, when tampering with railroad equip-

Legere Faces Court on Contempt Charge

MEL TROTTER WINS DIVORCE

CHARGES BY WIFE FAIL

Court Says There Is No Proof Evangelist Is Father of Girl's Child

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 25.—Judge Major L. Dunham of Superior Court today awarded a decree of absolute divorce to Melvin E. Trotter, superintendent of the Grand Rapids City Rescue Mission, formerly well-known evangelist.

He dismissed the suit for separate maintenance brought by Mrs. Trotter. He held Mrs. Trotter's charges that her husband had been unfaithful and that he had treated her cruelly had not been substantiated by evidence.

The court also held there was no evidence to substantiate the charges of Mrs. Trotter that her husband was the father of a child born in July, 1917, to Miss Florence Moody, secretary and bookkeeper at the Rescue Mission, or that he had "conducted himself with other women in an unbecoming manner."

The Judge, declared he believed Mrs. Trotter was actuated in filing her suit by the fact "that she never has been able to persuade the defendant to confess that he was the father of the Moody child."

The court holds Mrs. Trotter herself was guilty of extreme cruelty by circulating stories to the effect that her husband was the father of the Moody child.

As permanent alimony Mrs. Trotter is given the Trotter home and an adjoining house, rentals from which amount to $125 a month. Also the furnishings of the Trotter home and $5,000 in cash. The Trotter estate is valued at $35,000 or more.

The trial brought a denial by both Trotter and Miss Moody on the witness stand that the former was the father of Miss Moody's child.

COX DEMANDS SQUARE DEAL ON COAL

Charging that the confiscation of soft coal destined for New England and subsequently shipped to the Western states dangerously threatens the supply and may cause exhibitant prices to Massachusetts consumers, Governor Cox today appealed to Herbert Hoover for a square deal. Governor Cox sent this telegram to Sec. Hoover:

"Diversion of bituminous coal from West Virginia fields to Western states is interfering with contracts and exorbitantly enhancing the price of soft coal in this market. Settlement of bituminous strike has removed threatened danger of shortage of bituminous coal in Western states.

"Therefore, I request no further confiscation of soft coal destined for consumers of Massachusetts by general priority orders. Present priority orders are raising havoc with normal channels of distribution and unduly increasing prices here."

BACK BAY FIRE IS FATAL TO WOMAN

One woman was killed, three firemen injured and several tenants overcome by smoke in the fire at the Grenoble apartment house at No. 76 Westland avenue, Back Bay.

The dead woman is Mrs. Florence McNabb, partially blind, fifty years old.

The City Hospital reported at first that two women had died as a result of the fire. The other woman reported dead was Emily J. Benson West, sixty-six years old.

Later it developed that an Emily J. West had died at the hospital, but it was not the woman taken from the burning building. Miss West was reported as likely to recover.

Mrs. Theodora Hart, sixty-six years old, another of the women taken from the Grenoble, is also at the hospital, as well as three firemen.

Spectators of the blaze witnessed one of the most thrilling fire rescues ever seen in Boston.

The injured firemen are:

Captain Joseph Hanton, Engine No. 33.

Hoseman William Lannigan, Engine No. 33.

Ladderman John Cunningham, Ladder Company No. 15.

Cunningham was reported in a serious condition.

Out of sheer desperation one woman jumped from a second story window.

A score or more of tenants ran through smoke-choked corridors from the doomed dwellings. Women were found unconscious in the building by searching parties of firemen. A rickety wooden fire escape leading to the roof was noth-

FIST FIGHT IN JEWISH CEMETERY

Entire Families of Former and New Caretakers in Woburn Court

A fist fight between members of the Kritzer family and David Katcoff was the aftermath of a burial mystery in a Jewish cemetery owned by the Congregation Lebowitz in Woburn.

The fight, which lasted over an hour, was revealed today in Woburn Court before Judge Maguire.

A few weeks ago a body was discovered in a grave supposed to be vacant. When Caretaker Harry Kritzer was questioned he dropped dead. An investigation ensued, the Kritzer family was discharged as caretaker and David Katcoff appointed.

HIT BY STONE.

Last Tuesday, according to Katcoff, he was showing a woman through the cemetery. As they left Mrs. Fannie Kritzer, who occupies the house adjoining the cemetery, threw a stone at Katcoff, according to his testimony. The stone, he said, struck the woman visitor, laming her.

Mrs. Fannie Kritzer, who is sixty-two years old, grew so hysterical on the witness stand she had to be carried from the court room. She said previously that Kritzer had thrown a stone at her, laming her arm, and causing her to fall and hurt her head. She threw no stone, she said.

Then Joseph Kritzer appeared on the scene in time to see, he said, his mother being shoved by Katcoff. Whereupon he attacked Katcoff. Katcoff, he said, got a hold on him and would not let go. Soloman Kritzer, another brother, joined in the battle royal. Mrs. Sarah Kapas, a sister, joined in.

The fight was on when an auto passed and the occupants separated the combatants.

Then Katcoff swore out warrants against the entire Kritzer family on the charge of assault, and the Kritzers countered with like warrants.

Judge Maguire made no finding, but continued the cases for three months, saying if there was any more trouble severe penalties would be handed out.

SEIZED WHISKEY MAY BE RELEASED

The Canadian schooner Acadia, seized off Gloucester with 550 cases of whiskey on board, was the subject of a conference in the Federal Building today. The question was as to the rights of the authorities to hold her contents as she was seized more than two miles outside the three-mile limit.

Assistant U. S. District Attorney W. Keefe wired Washington for instructions. He gave it as his own opinion that the ship could not be held.

PANIC AT NORTH END BLAZE

Explosion In a Fleet Street House Alarms Scores in Vicinity; Child Rescued

Scores of women and children were thrown into panic, one man was injured, and a four-year-old child rescued by its mother at a fire, which followed an explosion in the four-story brick tenement house at Nos. 17-19 Fleet street, North End, today.

Teodore Fiscilio, owner of the building, was injured when struck on the head by flying glass, blown from the building by the force of the explosion. He was standing in a courtyard at the rear of the building.

The explosion, which wrecked two rooms on the second floor of the building, was followed by sheets of fire which leaped through the windows and licked up toward the roof. The corridors and narrow stairways were chocked with acid smoke.

In the rush from the building, four-year-old Joseph Catalo was left on the fourth floor. In spite of efforts of neighbors to hold her, Maggie Cataldo, the child's mother, dashed back through the smoke filled corridors and brought him out.

Several children playing on a roof over the apartment where the explosion occurred, were knocked down. They ran out screaming.

The blaze was confined to the two-room apartment of Mr. and Mrs. John DiAngelis on the second floor. They were attending a funeral at the time. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

NEAR DEATH AS HE DANGLES TO CAR

Haverhill, Aug. 25.—Dragged over switches through the freight yards at Haverhill, his head pounding on the ties, and only the cloth of his coat holding him from dropping beneath the wheels of a locomotive, Peter Stone, 55 years old, of Carver street, South Lawrence, is in serious condition at Hale Hospital here today.

Stone told officials he had been drinking and had started for his home. He remembers nothing after that.

It is believed he got into a freight car and was carried to Haverhill. It is thought he attempted to get out of the car and fell, his coat catching in the car door.

The car was picked up by a switching engine and shunted about the yard until an employe saw Stone's plight.

He was then rescued and rushed, unconscious, to the hospital. It was said he would live.

DECLARE BIG UNION DEFIED ORDERS

Leaders of Organization Accused of Posting Pickets in Violation of Injunction

Ben Legere, Fred St. Rock and Bert Emsley, officials of the One Big Union, came from Lawrence to Boston today to answer contempt charges in the Superior Court.

They are charged with violating an injunction obtained by the Pacific Mills.

On their way to the station Legere and St. Rock, who were not accompanied by Emsley, were greeted by a shouting, singing crowd who marched down Essex street, intending to join another throng at the station.

A police detail under Inspector Fred Lanen met the marchers at Essex and Amsbury streets, and dispersed them. The two leaders proceeded to the station, where they were cheered by about 200 more strikers. On leaving Legere said: "The Pacific Mills know that I am not guilty of contempt of court."

OFFER AFFIDAVITS.

The injunction was granted July 27 on a bill in equity filed by the Judge Keating in the Equity Motion other members of the Lawrence General Workers Unit of the One Big Union and the Lawrence Strike Committee.

It is charged that Legere, Emsley and St. Rock violated the injunction on various dates, and affidavits produced by the mills were offered when a petition for contempt was brought against the men.

Judge Louis Cox of Lawrence ordered the case to be heard at Boston, and it will be heard before Judge Keating in the Equity Motion Session of the Superior Court.

Some of the affidavits regarding the alleged violations of the injunction were made by John Hendry, superintendent of Mill No. 10 of the Worsted Department of the Pacific Mills, and by Joseph Mattey of Boston.

Superintendent Hendry said that

FEAR AMERICANS ARE LOST IN TYPHOON

Tokio, Aug. 25.—Fear was felt today for the safety of the steamer Mojave carrying Assistant Secretary of Commerce Huston's party at Yokohama due to the typhoon which raged off the coast of Japan yesterday. The Mojave is 36 hours overdue at Yokohama and has not been heard from since she left Hakadate on Tuesday with only sufficient oil to make Yokohama at half speed.

MOTHER SHOT WITH BABY IN HER ARMS

St. Louis, Aug. 25.—Five small children today mourned the death of their mother, Mrs. Martha J. Hembree, shot to death by her husband, Albert. A sixth child, too small to realize what had happened, a babe of one year, was found by police lying in the slain woman's arms. Four of the children witnessed the shooting.

on August 14 there were eight 125 strike pickets on Hampshire street in the vicinity of the mill, and more on August 16, 16 and 17.

Slattery said he attended a meeting August 13 on Lawrence Common when Legere informed his hearers they would visit Mill No. 10 the following Monday morning. He also quoted Legere as advising the Italian strikers to talk "bad Italian" to the Italian "scabs," and telling his hearers that the injunction was a joke.

Another Lawrence Mill Restores Old Wages

Lawrence, Aug. 25.—Notices were posted at the Kaisma Mill today that the rate of wages paid before the reduction that led to the textile strike would become effective beginning next Monday.

With this announcement, it was estimated that more than seventy-five per cent. of the textile workers who have been on strike since late in March had been offered their old wages. The Monomac Spinning Company, the Acadia Mill and the Pacific Mills Company had previously announced restoration of the former wages.

DIRECTOR SMITH 35 YEARS WEATHER HEAD

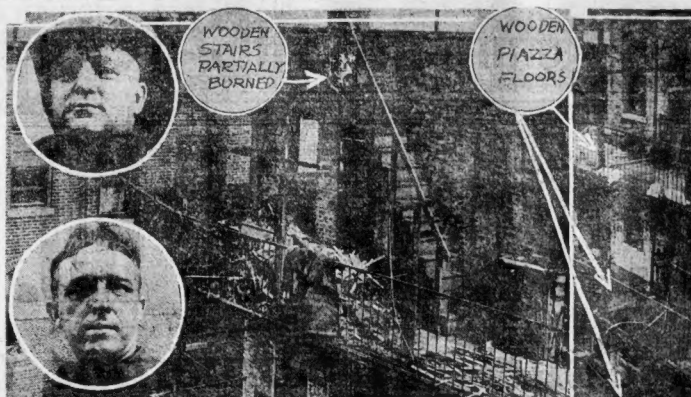

John W. Smith, the only man in New England properly entitled to use the old crack "Nice day, ain't it," is celebrating his 35th anniversary as New England Weather Man today. Mr. Smith, who has been the New England Director of the Weather Bureau for 35 years, with headquarters in the Federal Building has been keeping tabs on the weather for nearly half a century. "More progress has been made in the last six months than in the years previous in the methods of distributing weather information," said Director Smith. "Radio broadcasts are depended upon by hundreds of women to save their new hats from being ruined by unexpected storms."

DEER ISLANDER SWIMS AWAY TO FREEDOM

The police are searching for Albert Albrich, No. 100 West Springfield street, a negro, who escaped last night from the House of Correction on Deer Island.

The escape became known today when the police call was sent out. It was at rollcall at 9:15 last night that Albrich's absence was first noted. The prison guards were called out and made a search of the grounds, but no trace of Albrich was found.

It is believed he swam from Deer Island to Shirley Point. Early today it was found that a garage at Shirley Point had been broken into. Nothing was stolen. It is thought the escaped prisoner merely spent the night there.

Albrich was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction on July 25 for carrying a concealed weapon. He is described as being twenty-four years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighing 145 pounds.

ment results in the death of passengers or crew.

The law should pass, and any man, for any reason, interfering with rails, equipment or anything, to wreck a train, should be published as for murder, when life is lost, and in any case punished with a long term at hard labor.

But make sure your man is guilty. Sometimes the roads lie about it, to gain public sympathy for their side and to evade responsibility.

"A father worn out with age and infirmities," says Montaigne, "ought voluntarily to surrender to those to whom, by the order of nature, they (his possessions) belong."

Lord Roseberry has taken the advice. Disgusted with life and politics, he retires to a small residence, "seeking absolute solitude" and turns over his great estate to his son, Lord Dalmony.

Roseberry married an enormous fortune, with his wife, daughter and heiress of Baron Meyer Rothschild. He said he had two ambitions, to be Prime Minister of England and win the Derby. By the second wish you might know that he would make no great Prime Minister.

He became Prime Minister, succeeding Gladstone, and won the Derby three times. Because he had so much money, and such mixed ambitions, Roseberry—for whom Northcliffe had great admiration—wasted natural talents. He took HIMSELF too seriously, which prevented the world taking him as seriously as it might have done.

His good son, Primrose, was killed in the war, in Palestine, fighting for his mother's ancient home. His other and only son, formerly a good cricketer, now devotes his time to fox hunting.

Roseberry did write one good book, "Napoleon, the Last Phase." You ought to read it.

TWO FREED IN BLACK HAND DEATH CASE

Salvatore Tornamet and Dominick Bontarno walked out of Judge Dubuque's courtroom today free men.

Upon instructions from the judge the jury in the Black Hand case involving the murder of Michael Scarpone found the two not guilty.

Members of their families embraced Tornamei and Bontarno as bailiffs led them out of their cages. They have been in prison since April.

EVIDENCE LACKING.

During the progress of the trial no evidence was introduced which tended to show that they were in any way connected with the killing of Scarpone. It was evident for weeks that they would be released and that the jury would have to consider the cases of only four of the original seven defendants.

These are Joseph Simboli, Francesco Toscano, Antonio Mascatti and Giuseppe Amarado.

Luigi di Padova, another defendant, was adjudged insane during the progress of the trial and committed to the insane institution at Bridgewater.

FLAYS MASCATTI.

Felix Forte, counsel for Simboli, attacked Mascatti's testimony, and charged the alleged interpreter of the gang had double-crossed his client.

Peter C. Borre, counsel for Toscano, went even further than that. He referred to Mascatti as a "liar, and a crucifier."

"This trial," shouted Borre, "has been from start to finish a travesty on justice."

He said the State had not made any effort to show the connection between the New York gang of Italians who made their headquarters on Prince street, and the Scarpone murder.

As for Mascatti, he said, his work as letter-writer was not confined to the Scarpone case. He said that Mascatti had written other black hand letters.

DOCTOR, WIDOW IN COURT

Corey road, sat outside the courthouse in an automobile. She was represented by Attorney Fred L. Norton.

The bill of particulars asked that dates and locations be set forth, but the court ruled that locations were named in the warrant.

The love story of the physician and widow reaches from Winthrop to the Bahai Colony at Green Harbor, Mass., and back to Brookline. The Greens were said to have met Mrs. Elliott in Winthrop during the Summer of 1915.

She was the daughter of Jacob Faikson, head of a big clothing concern, and the wife of Morris Elliott, a wealthy resident of Brookline. Elliott was killed in an automobile accident two years ago.

Mrs. Green says that her husband deserted her for the other woman about a year ago. The complaint charges that the couple lived together since August 1. Several weeks ago they were located at the Buttenwerd Inn at the Bahai Colony in Green Harbor. They returned to Boston after friends of the Green family had intervened. The meetings were said to have continued and Mrs. Green at length obtained a warrant.

Michigan Fuel Head Again Hits at U. S. Board

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 25 (By the Associated Press).—Replying to a telegram received from Herbert Hoover, W. W. Potter, State Fuel Administrator, today declared the people of the State of Michigan "do not owe the Federal Fuel Administration any debt of gratitude for being without fuel supplies and being forced to pay profiteering prices for such coal as they can obtain in the open market."

NURSE FINDS BODY OF MAN IN HARBOR

Floating, face down, in the harbor off North End Park, the body of an unidentified man, believed to have met death under mysterious circumstances, was found by a young woman nurse.

The girl, Nurse Ross of the Boston Floating Hospital, saw the body from the deck of the steamship which is moored at the North End Park Pier.

The only clew to the identity of the man was the name "John Higgins," printed in ink, on the inside pocket of the coat where the name of the maker of the suit usually appears.

The harbor police were notified and the police boat Guardian recovered the body, which was fully clothed and had been in the water only a short time.

Medical Examiner Magrath was notified, and an investigation was begun to determine when, where and how the man met death. The body was taken to Constitution Wharf to await examination by the medical examiner and possible identification.

Captain Ross A. Perry, of the harbor police, was not prepared to say whether, in his judgment, the man was a victim of murder or suicide.

ing more than a grim joke during the height of the emergency.

Heated iron gratings of the escapeway, lapped by the tongues of flame, burned the feet of hysterical victim who were trying to escape.

The rescue through the alleyway was effected by Ladderman Daniel O'Leary, assisted by Ladderman William Kernan and William Malway.

RESCUERS DRIVEN BACK.

The men dashed up through the smoke filled hallways of the apartment house, but on reaching the fifth floor were driven back by the smoke and flames which poured out of the apartment. They climbed through the house next door, smashed in a window opening on to an alleyway which separated the two places.

O'Leary swung across into the burning apartment and caught up the women who were lying unconscious and passed them to his comrades. The slip of a hand or foot would have meant instant death on the flagstones seventy-five feet below to the firemen and their unconscious charges.

Mrs. McNabb was in a critical condition when carried out. Wilbert E. Longfellow of Washington, D. C., field agent of the National Safety Council of the American Red Cross, who has been assigned to Boston to teach firemen the "prone pressure" method of restoring persons overcome by smoke, had just finished a demonstration before a class of fire captains and lieutenants in Dorchester when the alarm came in.

He rushed to the fire and arrived at Westland avenue as Mrs. McNabb was carried to the sidewalk. He immediately applied the prone pressure method of resuscitation and restored Mrs. McNabb to consciousness.

The fire started in the apartment of Mrs. Ruth Nugent and soon spread to the adjoining apartment occupied by Miss Hart and Miss West. Mrs. McNabb was visiting the two women at the time. Mrs. Nugent was away from home.

Captain Joseph P. Hanton was overcome while leading his men on the fifth floor. He was carried down by Hosemen John Driscoll, Henry Wells and John Hassey. A few minutes later Hoseman William Lannigan fell a victim to the dense smoke. Both men were rushed to the City Hospital.

Ladderman John Cunningham of Ladder Company No. 15 slipped through a skylight and was badly bruised. He was treated by ambulance surgeons and returned to duty.

Thirty families were driven from the burning building and a crowd of several hundred persons gathered at Westland avenue and Hemenway street at the entrance to the Fenway, to watch the blaze.

BOUCHIE TESTIFIES IN OLD COLONY CASE

William Bouchie, former auditor of the defunct Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company, appeared today in the office of Arthur W. Black, referee in bankruptcy, and submitted to an examination by Attorney George Alpert. It was conducted behind closed doors, and is believed to have been on the subject of funds of the company. Alpert is counsel for John E. Hannigan, trustee of the Old Colony.

WIDOW TELLS OF BEATING WITH HAMMER

Although he has a wife and eight children, Dr. Louis Mansolillli proposed marriage to Mrs. Grace Lewis, Chelsea woman who recently inherited a small fortune. When she refused the doctor beat her with a hammer, according to charges made by the widow, which will be heard in the Chelsea District Court.

Mrs. Lewis was picked up, bruised and bleeding on the lonely Lynn marshes by autoists and taken to her home. Swathed in bandages, she told her story to a Boston American reporter.

"I have known the doctor for years," she said. "He often asked me to marry him. I knew that he had a wife and children and refused. His threatened to kill me several times.

"Last June I inherited quite a sum of money. Doctor Mansolillli knew of my legacy and at once proposed that I elope with him to Italy. He said he wanted to marry me and invest my money. When I refused him he threatened me.

"The night of the attack we went for an auto ride. When we were in the lonely stretch of the Lynn marshes he stopped the car and renewed his proposals. I refused him and he became angry.

"He picked up a hammer from the car and hit me on the arms and head and body.

"Then he put me out of the machine. I think I must have fainted for a while. But finally I got enough strength to start to walk back over the marshes. I was very weak. Then an auto came along with two young men in it and they took me home. Mrs. Lewis said she dreaded the publicity and notoriety of an appearance in court and would not appear against the doctor.

At his home, No. 81 Beacon street, it was said that Doctor Mansolillli, with her husband over the affair.

with his wife, had "left town for the day." It was during the influenza epidemic, while Mrs. Lewis was acting as a nurse for Mrs. Mansolillli, that she met the doctor.

The woman, whose husband was then living, from the first attracted the doctor. Other members of the family did not share his affection for her. A daughter declared her father whipped her when she made disparaging remarks about Mrs. Lewis.

Mention of the affair at the Mansolillli home caused no surprise to the children there. It was not the first time that they had heard of difficulties arising out of the friendship of the couple. Mrs. Mansolillli they said, had often remonstrated with her husband over the affair.

AVERT WRECK OF GOLD TRAIN AT LYNN

West Lynn residents were excited by visions of a train robbery when the American Express "Gold Train," bound from New York to Portland, was stalled, and several shots fired, in the freight yards.

It developed the train had been blocked by a broken beam on a preceding freight, and that a guard had fired when he saw a man running along the tracks.

The freight runs about twenty minutes ahead of the express to West Lynn where it is sidetracked, and the "Gold Train," with its valuable cargo, is given right of way.

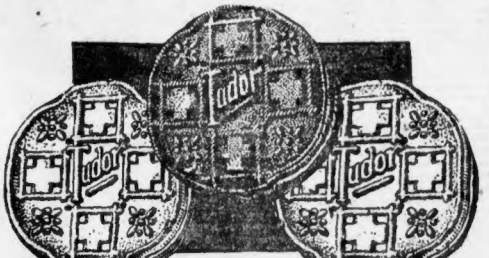

The freight had not cleared the track when, between Oak Island and the Saugus river, a brake beam broke and dropped to the track, stopping the train by spreading the rails.

A brakeman was rushed to the rear with a lantern, and he managed to stop the "Gold Train" thundering along behind. The accident occurred shortly before the Bangor express was due. As this train pulled into the yards and came to a stop a guard on the "Gold Train" saw a man run between two freight cars.

Suspecting a plot to rob the "Gold Train," he fired three shots into the air. A search of the yards was then made, but the stranger had disappeared.

Traffic was tied up for about an hour, but railroad officials denied that any attempt had been made to wreck the train.

Rothwell Girls Think They Can Reconcile Many Couples

By GRACE DESCHAMPS

"Rothwell & Rothwell—UNlimited."

"Looking for a divorce? See us first. No money down. Your husband back or we go out of business."

Notice that it reads: Your husband "back."

That's something the way the sign is going to look over the door of the law firm of Rothwell & Rothwell, practicing attorneys.

"It's got to be 'back'," explains the demure Miss Marjorie Rothwell, the junior partner of the firm-to-be. "When our firm deals in domestic relations we're going to do exactly the opposite of other attorneys.

"We're going to patch things up between the disagreeing couple. It's a sort of solidifying idea—declare a truce, thresh out the difficulties and try to effect a compromise or peace —that's our idea."

"BLESSED ARE PEACEMAKERS."

Incidentally, Rothwell and Rothwell will be the first law firm in the country to establish a business of this sort—in short, to become professional peacemakers. And the credit for attempting such an undertaking goes to two Boston girls, one of them 22 and the other 23.

The Misses Marjorie and Estelle Rothwell were graduated, respectively, from Boston University Law School and from the Portia Law School. They are the daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Charles R. Rothwell of No. 573 Broadway, South Boston.

"Yes, I know," laughed Miss Marjorie Rothwell today, "no one seems to know just why we're doing it. Well, why not? Every girl who's good for anything ought to be able to take her place in the world and hold down a job. I am an expert stenographer and so I am already pretty well able to take care of myself in an emergency, but I just wanted to see if I could climb up a step, that's all.

"As for the character of the business that we hope to establish when we have both secured sufficient experience, the idea is more or less due to heredity, I guess.

"My father is a physician, but you'd never think so sometimes, if you happened into his waiting rooms. You'd think he was a bureau of information. People come to him for every kind of advice under the sun, and they get it, too. I don't imagine that's very profitable from a financial point of view, but father doesn't seem to mind.

SMOOTHS DIFFICULTIES.

"Well, lots of people come to him when they'd simply had a scrap with their husbands or wives. Or else they come for treatment, and later confide in him that such a trouble exists. Sometimes young people who are in difficulty come to him, and I imagine there must be scores of young couples whom my father was instrumental in bringing together. Several times he has asked me to make a call of this kind for him. I never chanced to have the time, but the idea interested me so that I decided to look at it seriously.

"There certainly must be a lot of Stella Rothwell (at top) and Marjorie Rothwell, believing that many divorces are unnecessary, plan to establish a legal practice whose aim it will be to reconcile estranged couples before the divorce courts can get them.

satisfaction in realizing that you have put unhappiness to flight in some one's life

"It doesn't seem possible that there is any need for so many divorces. Of course, sometimes it is absolutely necessary to the happiness of both parties. But half the other problems that drive a couple to the divorce courts are the outgrowth of little petty things that have somehow come to exist because there wasn't understanding or tolerance enough between husband and wife.

"Sometimes it's money—or lack of it, that causes the trouble. Perhaps the husband in question is not exactly fair in the way in which he allots his money every week. Well, if an attorney has sympathy enough really to reach the husband and wife and bring them to the point where they will listen amicably to reason, there is hope.

COMMON GROUND NEEDED.

"There is always hope in any quarrel if the principals can meet on some common ground where a little understanding can creep in between them.

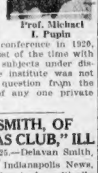

"I think most people who go looking for divorces—most of them—after a hasty quarrel, really do care about each other. But their vision is blurred temporarily and they want satisfaction.

"If the attorneys in this country would just get together and work for domestic peace instead of so many separations America would no longer be called the 'country of divorces.'"

BAR PUPIN SPEECH AT POLITIC INSTITUTE

Williamstown, Aug. 25.—Professor Michael I. Pupin, New York electrical engineer, was barred from delivering an address in the interest of the cable companies at the round table conference on international electrical communication services of the Institute of Politics.

Walter S. Rogers, American delegate to the International communications conference in 1920, who occupied most of the time with a review of the subjects under discussion, said the institute was not considering the question from the point of view of any one private company.

A Contributor to Health & Happiness

If only because it means getting out into the fresh air, the possession of an automobile would justify itself. Add to this the pleasure which comes through long, comfortable rides through the country and an automobile becomes almost a family necessity.

It may be an economical possession, too. The "Automobile Exchange" columns of The American, over in the Want Ad Section, give many opportunities for buying good used cars at reduced prices.

Plan to give your family a fuller measure of happiness by the purchase of one of these cars. Investigate the offerings or run an ad asking for what you want in a car. Both ways will facilitate your purchase.

GIRL'S SCREAMS LEAD TO RESCUE IN FELLS

After a terrific struggle with Joseph J. Raiola, a chauffeur, in the woods near Spot Pond, Middlesex Fells Reservation, fourteen-year-old Mildred Smith, of No. 32 Buckman street, Winthrop, was rescued by Metropolitan Park Policeman James P. Daley today.

Daley, summoned by an old man who heard the girl's screams, arrested Raiola, who is married, and he was later arraigned in Woburn Court on a charge of criminal assault.

The girl told the police she met Raiola in a store on Summer street, Boston. After a few moments conversation, she said he invited her to take an automobile ride, and she accepted.

They drove out to Spot Pond, and leaving the car, walked to a secluded spot, where Raiola is alleged to have attempted to attack the girl. She fought the man and her screams were heard by an aged employe of the park system who was picking up refuse nearby. Hurrying to the spot the man saw the struggling forms of the girl and Raiola, and darting to the road, caught Officer Daley. Raiola offered no resistance when placed under arrest. He gave his address as Franklin street, Roneham.

LIVE WIRE KILLS LINEMAN IN SOMERVILLE

Hugh Terrell, thirty years old, of Beachmont, an Edison Company lineman, was electrocuted today when 4,300 volts went through his body while he was working on a pole on Highland avenue, Somerville.

The excitement was increased by arrival of two pieces of fire apparatus, the fire department having been notified that a man was caught on top of a pole.

According to police, Terrell came into contact with a high tension wire. Daniel F. McDonald, the foreman, of No. 75 Bristol road, Somerville, and Leslie Cameron, No. 58 Bartlett street, Roxbury, pulled the wire away. A rope was thrown up by John J. Gillis, of No. 6 Elsworth street, Somerville, and Terrell was lowered to the ground and hurried to the hospital.

Patrolmen Raymond, McDonald and Elliott were then sent to the hospital with the police pulmotor.

BURGLARS BLOW SAFE, GET $800

For the third time in thirteen months the office of the Texas Oil Company, No. 248 Essex street, Swampscott, was entered by yeggmen early today and robbed of $800. The men escaped in automobiles.

The thieves blew the office safe, after forcing a rear window, and secured $300 and $500 in checks.

Three weeks ago the place was entered in the same way, the thieves being frightened away before obtaining any loot. A year ago last May it was robbed for the first time, and $90 stolen.

Today's break was discovered by Cashier Irving B.W. Eaton and Driver F. B. Carey. The yeggs had broken the lock on the motor building, there obtained a tool with which they forced a window in the office.

Nitro-glycerin was apparently used to blow the safe, but it was so well muffled that the explosion raised no alarm. State Inspector Murray said he thought the robbery was committed by motor bandits. Two weeks ago the company's office in Somersworth, N. H., was robbed and the safe blown.

Flapper Gets All Wrapped Up in Her New Job of Pasting Posters

LOOK OUT BELOW!

The way I look at it, if you get all wrapped up in it, I didn't bills what there is most in Boston signs.

By THE FLAPPER

If you aren't satisfied with the troubles you've got now try pasting posters around town on a windy day. I tried it yesterday and almost choked to death. You would thought was the dame who jump through the paper hoop in the circus.

Every time I got the gosh durned poster all pasted and ready to be hoisted in the air, along came a slap o' wind and wind in the fool thing around my neck and my neck in the bum's rush from the cops.

The way I happened to take the job was this: I asked Mr. George A. Giles if there wasn't something I could do around his theater so I could get in to see the show opening night.

I GET THE JOB.

"Couldn't I carry the water to the elephant, or somthin?" I asked him.

"Sh," warned the manager in a worried voice. "Don't let the 'heavy' hear you or he'll leave the cast. He's awful touchy."

"Well, then, couldn't I chuck up the town with handbills?"

Mr. Giles wrinkled his brow in deep thought.

"Do you know anything about paper - hanging?" he asked.

"Anything."

"There are still a few posters that oughta be pasted around town. If you think you could—"

SIGN MOVES ON ME.

"Where's the paste?" I interrupted. And a few minutes later I was flat-wheeling down Huntington avenue with a pail of paste in one hand, a roll of "Next Week: Nothing But the Truth," in the other and a paste brush clutched tightly in my teeth.

I hafta admit I made a few slight mistakes. The first poster I put up was a disappointment. I was just leaning on a corner flap to get it neatly flat when the sign started to move an' I bit the dust. How'd I know I was pasting the ornery thing on the rear facade of a ford?

Wherever I went I got chased. The cops wouldn't let me paste posters on the old elm on the Common, although I can't think of a better place for signs.

BARRED AT LIBRARY.

The man at the Public Library was terribly put out because I tried to put some of my signs on the front of the building. And even the sexton of a church chased me because I was using the bulletin board for my signs, although I don't see why "Nothing But the Truth" wouldn't make a swell sermon.

After a hard day I finally had an inspiration. I took the whole works down to the water front and pasted my posters on the sea. If there're a lotta fish gonna do a thing at all you oughta now until I spent a day posting Now I know. It's "Post no Bills"

BERLIN PARLEY ON REPARATION OFF

(By the Associated Press.)

Paris, Aug. 25.—The negotiations in Berlin between the Reparations Commission and German government officials came to an end today without any compromise acceptable to both the British and French representatives, according to latest advices here.

Sir John Bradbury and Eugene Mauclere, British and French representatives, respectively, of the Reparations Commission, were expected to leave Berlin at once.

The French foreign office learned unofficially that new proposals were submitted at the foreign session by the Germans, but they were not considered important enough to warrant the Mission's remaining in Berlin. The Reparations Commission's representatives will bring the proposals to Paris, considering them enroute.

WIFE AND "LOVE THIEF" ARE MISSING

By HAROLD R. HALL.

Another love tragedy, in which a young and attractive wife deserted her husband and two babies to run away with a married man, was disclosed to the Boston American today by Henry J. Leonard, a young marine engineer of Roxbury.

Leonard charges that his wife, Lillian Leonard, ran away with another man two weeks ago. He further charges that she told her friends that she was going away "to marry the other man," who lives in Roxbury.

HE IS 37; SHE, 28.

Mrs. Leonard has two small children, one three years old, the other one year old. The other man, according to Leonard, is married, but separated from his wife, and has a daughter. Mrs. Leonard is twenty-eight years old. The other man is thirty-seven.

"If he had come to me like a real he-man and had told me that he loved my wife and that she loved him, I would have given her to him without a struggle," said Leonard, when found by the reporter at his little home in Roxbury.

"I wanted my wife to be happy. If she loved another man better than she loved me, all she needed to have done was to have told me. I would have told her to go ahead and be happy. I would have done nothing to stand in the way of her happiness.

"But neither he nor Mrs. eLonard told me. Like a thief in the night he stole her away—took her away from me and our little babies. Now he shall pay.

"He has been interfering with my home and happiness for more than a year. He started while I was out of the State on a job. I learned that he was coming to see my wife.

"I questioned her and forgave her, for I felt that while she had not used discretion she had been loyal to me anyway. I was willing to let it pass. She did not tell me that she loved him. I wanted to keep the home together for the babies.

GOT JOB AS NURSE.

"But she grew restless and wanted to go to work. She had been a trained nurse before we were married. She told me that she had secured a position in a Somerville hospital.

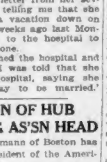

"I received a letter from her several weeks ago, telling me that she was going on a vacation down on the Cape. Two weeks ago last Monday I went out to the hospital to see if she had gone.

"When I reached the hospital and asked for her, I was told that she had left the hospital, saying she 'was going away to be married.'

$4000 JEWELRY ROBBERY IN GLOUCESTER

Gloucester, Aug. 25.—The mysterious second story worker, who has stolen thousands of dollars worth of jewelry from wealthy homes in Gloucester during the past two weeks, is active again.

Last night more than $4,000 worth of miscellaneous jewelry was stolen from the home of John W. Bowler, former Worcester brewer.

The Bowler house at Bass Rock was entered while the occupants were dining, the screen was removed from the window of the room occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Joyce of Brookline, the daughter and son-in-law of John Bowler. No clew was left by the invader.

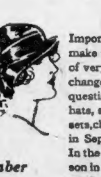

Two other attempts were made to enter houses, last evening. The Ahearn cottage at Pigeon Cove was broken into, but the arrival of servants prevented any loss. The home of Dr. William Jarvis at Bass Rock was also broken into, but the screams of Mrs. Jarvis and her maid frightened the intruder.

Great mystery and secrecy is being maintained by the local police concerning the robbery of $4200 worth of jewelry last Monday night from the home of Harry Minor of Baltimore. There are no clews and the police declare they have no information on the affair.

LOSS OF LOVE DROVE GIRL TO DEATH

The bitter story of an unrequited love, the desperate measures to win the man she wanted, the despair of that love which proved greater than life and honor, was told today, following the tragic death of Corrine Sequin of Haverhill, who, while talking to her sweetheart placed a revolver to her temple and shot herself dead.

Paul Cappola, manager of a private detective agency in Haverhill today revealed the story of the girl.

ENGAGED TO JOHNSON.

She was engaged to be married to Lloyd Johnson, a mechanic in a White street garage. Something happened and the love of her sweetheart cooled. He broke the engagement.

Desperate, she sought him. She pleaded with him and begged him to marry her. He remained cold and indifferent to her pleadings. But the pretty Corrine was not a girl to be thwarted easily. Doggedly she cast aside her pride and tried again.

They became reconciled, but still Johnson would not take the matrimonial step. The pair were sweethearts, But Corrine suspected that Johnson went out with other girls.

She applied to the detective agency for an operative. She told the agent that Johnson had promised to marry her and refused.

Regretfully the detective told the frantic girl that the law would not allow him to take her case.

KEPT HER SECRET.

"I can't go to the police for it all must be kept secret. And Oh! How I love him!"

A month later she called her sweetheart to the 'phone, whispered some message to him, that is locked behind the sealed lips of the man, and with her parrot screeching, the only witness to the ending of the strange tragedy, placed a twenty-two calibre revolver to her head and pulled the trigger, while Johnson held the other end of the wire.

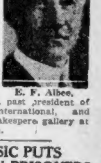

The final chapter of the tragic romance will be enacted tomorrow when Miss Sequin will be buried.

Today, Johnson, asked if he had been engaged to the girl replied that "It was nobody's business."

MOVIE MUSIC PUTS "JAZZ" IN PRISONERS

New York, Aug. 25.—The reason for the overwrought nerves of the prisoners confined in the Bronx prison, causing them to yell, rattle tin pans and raise a regular din at very irregular intervals, has been traced to Warden Lewis E. Lawes. He declares that snatches of music from an adjoining theatre organ, playing continuously from eleven to eleven daily are responsible.

The music could be heard only brokenly because of the peculiar acoustic properties of the prison's walls which permitted only bits of the music to penetrate. Sheriff Flynn said: "Nobody's going to torture my prisoners with half portions of music."

EXPERTS RAP WORKING GIRLS AS WOEFULLY "EXTRAVAGANT"

1 STREET DRESS, 2 HATS A YEAR ENOUGH, STATE WAGE COMMISSION RULES

By MARGERY LEE.

If you have more than one street dress and two hats a year, you are an extravagant woman, according to the standards which the budgets of the Massachusetts Minimum Wage Commission sets for working girls.

You are supposed to make a pair of corsets last two years, and a kimono, costing $2.98, should stretch over five years of service.

Your principal recreation should be semi-annual trips to the dentist, and you may contribute $.07 a week to charity, presumably other than that which begins and ends at home.

NO ROUGE OR CANDY.

Such is the life indorsed by the State House budget for working women earning between $15 and $25 a week.

She should spend $154.92 per year for her clothes and $1 a day for meals. Breakfast may cost $.25, lunch $.30 and dinner $.45.

Incidentals, such as hairpins, hair nets, handkerchiefs, toilet accessories, stationery and stamps, shoestrings, etc., should cost $.28 per week. No mention is made of rouge or earrings.

The budget is sublimely unconcerned about change of styles. A heavy coat costing $40 is supposed to weather three winters, with a new lining costing $4.25 each season. A working girl is supposed to worry along on three union suits a year, and on six pairs of stockings. No wonder they have been accused of eliminating all but the essential undergarments. At the bottom of the inflexible clothes budget (here in the following article) we see: "Bargain sales should be patronised whenever possible."

Miss Ethel M. Johnson, the fair assistant commissioner of the Minimum Wage Commission, declares that after a thorough investigation of living conditions among unmarried working women, that $9 is the least possible amount required to lead a decent existence, and that $17 per week should keep a working girl supplied with all the reasonable luxuries of life.

WOMEN WASTE MONEY.

"Working women waste most of their money, because they actually do not know how they are spending it. They spend each dollar at a time, and have no perspective on the whole. They spend $1.50 for a jar of face cream and then quiet their consciences by saving 40 cents a week on cheap lunches.

Miss Johnson says few women know how to save their money. "The habit of thrift is a symptom of old age, and rarely an asset of youth. Girls in their twenties look upon their future as an investment, into which they put all their present capital.

"They buy stock in the form of frivolous clothes and good times, even though they realize that the stocks are apt to pay uncertain interest. But there is always the chance that the investments will bring fabulous results in the way of wealthy marriage.

"If misfortune strikes them, they are surprised that they haven't foreseen the possibility of being without funds and determine that as soon as they begin earning again, they will lay aside a certain sum every week. But they usually forget their good intentions, blithely going on, hoping that something fortunate will happen."

Here's the Official Wardrobe of Working Girl

Here are the wardrobe items, their cost and the length of wear as prescribed by the wage commission for working girl:

One serge dress, $20, per year. One voile dress, $15, per two years. One heavy coat, $40, per three years. One suit, $25, per three years. One heavy skirt, $13, per two years.

Two dress blouses, $1.63 per year. Four shirt waists, $1, per year. Two white petticoats, $1, per year. One colored petticoat, $1.25, per year. Two nightgowns, $1, per year.

Six pair stockings, 85c, per five years. One kimona, $2.98, per five years. Three union suits, 65c, per year. Three vests, 30c, per year. Three envelope chemise, 75c, per year.

One pair corsets, $2 per two years. Five bungalow aprons, $1.45, per year. One umbrella, $2.50, per two years. One Summer hat, $1.85, per year.

One Winter hat, $3, per year. One pair gloves, $1, per year. Three pair shoes, $7.50, per year. Shoe repair, $3. Two pair rubbers, $1, per year. One lining for coat, $4.25 per year.

Total per year, $154.92. Weekly average, $2.98.

BANKS LENDING MONEY ON DEPOSITS

The "hard-times" banking law went into effect today.

Depositors may now borrow up to 90 per cent. of their deposits without losing their dividends. The pass book may be left at the bank as security.

The new law is an alternative to the old one which requires a depositor to lose his interest if he withdraws any part of his deposit before the interest day.

Under another bank law, in effect today, savings banks and trust companies are prohibited from requiring a ninety-day notice of intention to withdraw funds from more than ten depositors at any one time, unless they notify all depositors and the bank commissioner that a general moratorium is on.

This law is intended to prevent the alleged practice of allowing favored depositors to withdraw funds during the existence of a ninety-day moratorium.

FIGHT TO SAVE SEIZED YANKEE STEAMSHIP

Naples, Aug. 25.—An emergency crew of water pumpers was working today to prevent the sinking of the American steamship Philadelphia, whose lower compartments were found flooded.

During the night the steamer, which was seized by the police this week in connection with the controversy over alleged unpaid bills, and seventy-six members of whose crew were arrested on Wednesday, began to list and an inspection showed some of the water cocks had been left open. The authorities think the cocks were left open by members of the crew before being taken ashore.

New York, Aug. 25.—The Mallory liner Rio Grande was badly damaged by fire while she was in a Brooklyn dry dock today. It is believed a workman dropped a lighted match in a hold and the fire smouldered until it broke out fiercely tonight. Two fire boats were called to help fight the blaze.

Los Angeles, Aug. 25.—Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Reid expect to be presented with a bouncing baby girl soon, according to a petition on file in the Superior Court today which asks the legal adoption of Betty Mummert, three years old. The child's parents have consented to the adoption. Mrs. Reid is known to the screen as Dorothy Davenport.

MOVIE WORLD NEWS AND GOSSIP

THE arrival of John Emerson and his wife, Anita Loos, on the Majestic, after a five months' visit abroad, was a signal for all those actively interested in the movie industry to find out about the situation abroad, particularly in regard to the German producers. They seem to have been thought the chief competitors of Americans.

Mr. Emerson says there is no real danger of an invasion of this country by European films. Taken by and large, the foreign pictures have failed to win any great laurels in this country, with the exception of one or two outstanding productions. Ernst Lubitsch and Pola Negri, the two most successful of the German film people, are about to embark for this country, since they feel that they have a larger market if their pictures are made here instead of abroad.

DOROTHY FOR MARY PICKFORD

MARY PICKFORD has been casting about for a costume play for some months, but has been disappointed in the three stories that she particularly wanted. Marion Davies had already bought the film rights of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," when Miss Pickford applied for them. "Our Mary" then turned to "To Have and To Hold" and while she was considering whether or not it was suitable, Famous Players-Lasky bought it and started work on it with Betty Compson and Bert Lytell.

Mary Pickford

Miss Pickford then decided to do "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," and found that Madge Kennedy had already bought the story and was holding it for her second production for the Kenna Corporation. When Miss Kennedy was offered too tempting an offer to appear on the stage this Winter, she signed up and decided not to make a second production till Spring. Accordingly, she sold "Dorothy" to the Pickford firm for an advance over the sum she had paid for it, thereby proving her business ability.

IN KEATON'S MAIL

SOMEONE asked us the other day why it was that so many pictures have everything but plot. May be this is the answer:

A few weeks ago Buster Keaton received a scenario from a budding author, which was extremely simple in general make-up. The following letter accompanied it:

"I am forwarding you a story which I believe will be acceptable. In perusing the narrative you will find that the plot is missing. This was intentional. I left it out for fear someone would steal it. I am firmly opposed to plagiarism."

MISS HOLMQUIST BACK

ANOTHER passenger on the Majestic yesterday was Sigrid Holmquist, the "Swedish Mary Pickford," who returned to these shores to fulfill her contract with Pyramid Pictures Corporation, for whom she will make a picture shortly.

Sigrid Holmquist.

Miss Holmquist has spent the Summer with her family in Sweden and has been telling all the Swedish producers how they do things in this country.

FOX BUYING STORIES.

THIS year should be somewhat of a fox year, if story-buying is any indication, for Winfield Sheehan, vice-president of the concern is keeping his fountain pen busy these days signing checks for authors.

The list of stories bought for the season of 1922-1923 was made public yesterday. It included "West," by Charles Seltzer; "The Roof Tree," by Charles Buck; "Lynch Lawyers," "The Buster," and "The Heart of the Range," all by William Patterson White; "In Calvert's Valley," by Margaret Montague, and "Alcatraz," by Max Brand.

An interesting purchase is "The Shadow of the East," the new novel by E. M. Hull, which is a successor to the famous "The Sheik." Fox is taking no chances on having another company scoop up these torrid affairs. "Truxton King," by George Barr McCutcheon; "The Splendid Outcast," by George Gibbs; "Mixed Faces," by Roy Norton; "Dr. Rameau," from a French novel by Georges Ohnet, and "A Self-Made Man," by George Horace Lorimer, editor of the Saturday Evening Post.

It is an imposing array.

CAMBRIDGE

WELLS WARNS OF U. S.-BRITISH TRADE WAR OVER DEBT ISSUE

ENGLAND TO PAY IF FORCED

"Will Be a Long Time Before "Obligation Is Cancelled," Says Novelist

By CLARA WOLD

Copyright 1922, by Cosmopolitan News Service.

London, Aug. 25.—"England certainly will pay her debt to America,—if America insists on her paying," H. G. Wells, famous British novelist told me today.

"But America," he said, "will have to understand that the payment must be made through trade. Otherwise there will be an explosion!"

"And if America wants payment in gold?" I questioned.

"Ah, well," replied Mr. Wells, quite calmly, "I suppose if America insists on gold she will get it that way. We can't help ourselves. But it will be a long time in any case before the debt will be paid. The debt is one we know we must pay if America demands it and even if we must find gold we can even usually do that. We are getting some gold in South Africa already and we would perhaps be able in time to secure together enough.

"The truth of the matter is that America doesn't need gold and doesn't want a great deal of gold dumped on her just now. And, so, just as long as America does not create a trade blockade with a prohibitive tariff system, all will go well.

H. G. Wells.

IN PROPHETIC MOOD.

"Yes, England will pay unless America stops her trade, in which case something will blow up. She will put her hand down in her pocket and pay politely enough, but she won't like America any too much while she does it, and will continue to think that America should have come into the war from the first, instead of selling war munitions for three years.

We were having a comfortable English tea and Mr. Wells, the prophet-novelist who has graphically and not infrequently with extraordinary accuracy described the future, was in a happy prophetic mood that ran all the way from predictions concerning his election to Parliament within the next year and a half to the future of American literary production.

As the lone American there I sat in solemn silence listening to Britain, psycho-analyzing America. It was Anna Wickham, the English poet, who started the analysis by asking:

"How do you explain the inferiority complex evidenced by so many American intellectuals? Why have they too much respect for our English institutions and our art?"

DISCUSSES AMERICANS.

I turned to find Mr. Wells standing nearby looking very little like the terrier with tumbled hair that he says he resembles, as he entered into a long conversation with Americans with all the enthusiasm of an onlooker who is really rather proud that the human race has produced such a nation as the United States.

"Perhaps they do suffer a little from a sense of inferiority," he replied. "What I discovered about Americans when I was in America is that they are essentially courteous kind and shy. Contrary to the general opinion, both they and other people have concerning them, they are not aggressive, but modest. And they are kind," he repeated.

"I have never met an American yet," Anna Wickham said, "who didn't know all about Freud. That's why I like them. They all talk about complexes, but not one of them has resolved his own.

"Oh but they like their complexes," interrupted Mr. Wells. "Their complexes are their pets. But the extraordinary thing about Americans is that they haven't enough conceit. They lack national self belief. Look at their attitude toward the English writers, in the main.

"They are getting over their old acceptance of English criticism. But they still have too much respect for European art and overlook their own most vigorous and courageous art production. At one time they had so much respect for European work they didn't recognize their own good writers."

TALKS OF LITERATURE.

"Does England have poets to compare with the young American poets right now?"

"We have a few outstanding ones, of course, two or three. But America has groups of poets to our few individuals. They have a school of poetry in Chicago, another out West, another in New York and so on. And they write more vital poetry besides. If they had more confidence in themselves they would write even better. They have fully as many minor poets as we have and they write seriously and with splendid spirit among themselves.

"But look at their prose writers in the past. When there has been a real writer of prose, America has not appreciated him. The greatest American prose writers have, in the past, been received at home only after England had accepted them. "There was Stephen Crane, for instance. He came to England after complete failure in America. He wrote The Red Badge of Courage,' which England received with enthusiasm. He was a good friend of Conrad and myself and I esteemed him greatly. Then he wrote other stories that England liked and praised and finally America recognized him, too. When I was in America his fiftieth birthday anniversary was celebrated there—after his death.'

"But," I interrupted, "perhaps we would not have such good writers of prose if we had not looked to England so respectfully. It has been said of most of your young modern novelists that they learned to write by reading Mr. Wells' novels."

"Flattery, flattery," returned Mr. Wells. "Just as I said all Americans are kind."

14 GIFTS FOR "CHARMING GIRL"

Two fine hats have been added to the list of gifts that Boston merchants will present to the winner of the Boston American's MOST CHARMING girl tournament. This makes fourteen articles of wearing apparel or adornment that leading Hub merchants have contributed for "Miss Boston."

The hats will be presented to the girl chosen as "Queen of the Hub," by George L. Griffin & Son, No. 370 Washington street, one of the best known concerns in the city. And they will be good hats, too, girls; hats you will be pleased to wear.

It won't cost you a cent to enter. Simply fill out the coupon and send your best photograph to the American. The judges will select twenty-five and then invite the girls to meet them. At this meeting the final choice will be made.

After "Miss Boston" is chosen she will be completely outfitted by the Boston merchants who have contributed articles for her wardrobe. Then she will go to Atlantic City to conquer the national judges, who, at a grand ball will pick "Miss America," from girls representing seventy-five leading cities.

ALLEGED AUTO THIEF ALTERS PLATE DATE

The ruse of John F. Farraher of No. 63 Church street, Watertown, of altering the date of two 1920 automobile number plates to 1922 availed him nothing against the wit of inspectors from the highway commissioner's office, and he was held today before the Waltham Court for larceny of a car and driving an unregistered car. He was discharged on the first complaint, and was immediately rearrested by Lexington officers on the same charge. The other complaint was continued to September 20. It is alleged that Farrahar stole the car from A. W. Smith of Lexington.

Mrs. "Reggie" Foster Added to Society Dance List by Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

Miss Berthe Braggiotti.
Miss Francesca Braggiotti.
Miss Louisa Hoar.
Miss Helen Bennett.
Mrs. Reginald Foster.

YOU couldn't imagine a "best dancer" list without Mrs. Reggie Foster, could you? Well, neither could I, so I've added her to the list today, which list will be complete tomorrow.

Not only does the vivacious wife of young Reggie Foster possess a pair of extremely nimble feet, but she has also been endowed with the knack of originating some very attractive dances, as well as the costumes for them.

You remember, of course, the very "ducky" costumes of the "waitresses," the "bathing girls," the "tennis girls" and the "golf girls," who sang and danced so delightfully in "Now and Then." Those costumes were designed by Mrs. Foster, who, by the way, was formerly Miss Frances Hoar, daughter of Mrs. Frederick H. Gillette, wife of the Speaker of the House.

But Mrs. Reggie is quite a veteran at the costume-designing and dance-arranging game. For instance—when the Vincent Club presented "Helio Prince" back in 1918, one of the most tremendous hits of the show was the pantomime dance by the former Frances Hoar and Elsie Burr, who is now Mrs. Sherwood of New York. In this number, which was distinctly Oriental, Mrs. Foster was entirely in cloth of gold, with gilded face, neck and arms. Miss Burr, as the god of war, was in blue and pink.

The preceding year, when the Vincentites presented "S. S. Romantic" for their annual show, the former Frances Hoar played the part of an Arab woman. Later on the club gave "Pleasure Island," written by these two clever sisters, Miss Margot Amory and Mrs. Arnold Hunnewell, who was then, of course, Mary Copley Amory.

Those who witnessed the performance of "Pleasure Island" cannot but remember the effectiveness of Frances Hoar's unique Greek dance in a black and gold costume. Then came "Satni," "When North Meets South," and this last year, "Now and Then," and in each of these clever Vincent shows the one-time Miss Hoar contributed not a little to its success.

MRS. REGINALD FOSTER

Like her sister, Miss Louisa Hoar, Mrs. Reggie Foster (Frances Hoar) adorns our list of Boston's six best dancers in the world of fashion. Tomorrow the list will be completed.—Photo copyright by Bachrach.

EVERYONE knows, I suppose, that Mrs. Reggie Foster is the sister of Miss Louisa Hoar, who is also down on our list of Boston's six best society dancers. Even though the former Frances Hoar has joined the ranks of the Married Maidens, as the social register terms them, she and her sister are still commonly known as The Hoar Sisters. For they very frequently dance together. It was, in fact, only last week that the sprightliness of their toes added greatly to the jollity of a smart North Shore charity function.

Mrs. Foster, who is the older of the two sisters, is somewhat the taller of the two, but she possesses the same flashing hazel eyes, the same fluffy light brown hair and the same vivacity as Louisa. Mrs. Reggie is rather noted for the strikingness and originality of her gowns, most of which she designs herself.

All society recalls the very important ceremonial which transformed the eldest daughter of the late Representative Rockwood Hoar into the bride of Reginald C. Foster, popular Harvard '11 man. The wedding was solemnized a year ago last June in the Church of Presidents at the capital, and all the high lights of Washington's social and official life turned out for the occasion.

Following their marriage, the young couple sailed on a long tour to the Orient, returning to Boston only this Spring. At present they are Summering along the North Shore, where they are among the jolliest members of the gay, younger married set.

NORTH SHORE estates are hardly noted for their easy approaches. On the contrary, the majority are quite hidden from the public view.

Such a place is the home of the Russell Burrages in Beverly Farms. It is tucked away on a winding, woody road, but it is as charming as it is hidden away. The master and mistress call it "Brookwood Farm," and it's a large, roomy house, built around a swimming pool bordering an old-fashioned garden.

The house is an old one with many chimneys, and inside there are no end of little steps going up or down when one crosses the threshold to go into another room.

MR. AND MRS. LYON WEYBURN and their children have returned to their Summer home, "Valleylock," at Beverly Farms, after a month spent in the mountains.

WHEELER TO TINKHAM: FALSE AND FOOLISH

Washington, Aug. 25.—"False, flimsy and foolish," was the description applied by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, today to the charges of Representative Tinkham, that the league had "poured money into the Seventh Minnesota District to elect Representative Volstead, father of the dry law. Wheeler accused Tinkham of "stabbing the Eighteenth Amendment in the back" by advocating light wines and beer.

BELIEVE COUP PLANNED BY DE VALERA

London, Aug. 25.—Reports that Eamon De Valera has broken through the regulars' lines and appeared in County Louth, were received from Belfast this afternoon.

Belfast, Aug. 25. (By International News Service).—Eamon De Valera, commander-in-chief of the Republicans, has made a dramatic appearance at the head of a little army in County Louth, according to information received here today. Last reports placed De Valera in Southeastern Ireland. De Valera is believed to be planning a coup.

De Valera was said to have been seen at Dundalk conferring with General Aiken of the Republicans. This led to predictions that De Valera contemplates attempting a march southward upon Dublin.

The report of De Valera's presence at Dundalk aroused the local Free State authorities to action. They tried to find De Valera, but failed, however. They arrested a man who was accused of having given him refuge.

Free Staters Win Many New Victories

Dublin, Aug. 25.—While the body of Michael Collins rested in state in the City Hall today, viewed by thousands, reports were received by the Free State Ministry of Defence of many victories over the Republicans along the western battle front.

Free State troops have captured Kinsale, Dungarvan and Dunmanway. A detachment of Free Staters raided Limerick, capturing twenty Republicans. A number of machine guns, 7,000 rounds of ammunition and other equipment were seized.

Many Republicans in the Cork area, incensed by the death of Michael Collins, are laying down their arms and are pledging their allegiance to the Free State. On the other hand, however, other Republicans are concentrating at Ballinhasig and are preparing to give battle to the Free Staters.

The forthcoming session of the Dail Eireann has been postponed until Sept. 9.

There is keen interest as to the successors of Collins and Griffith. It is considered likely that their places will be permanently filled by Mulcahy and William F. Cosgrave, respectively soldier and civic student.

AUTOIST WITH 'PULL' LOST IT AT ONCE

He was large and loud-voiced and arrogant, and claimed much influence with those seated in high places.

He added that any policeman who interfered with him might just as well seek another job.

Whereupon Motor Cycle Officer Asa Darsney of the Lynn police ordered him out of the long, expensive, multi-cylindered car he was driving and arrested him for drunkenness, operating while under the influence of liquor and using profane and indecent language.

He gave his name as William F. O'Brien of No. 57 Mountford street, Boston. With O'Brien in the car was a Boston policeman and his wife.

The incident occurred today at Commercial and Charles streets, Lynn, after O'Brien, in reversing the car, nearly ran over Officer Darsney.

The report of De Valera's presence at Dundalk aroused the local Free State authorities to action. They tried to find De Valera, but failed, however. They arrested a man who was accused of having given him refuge.

Accuses Wife

George W. Grebenstein of Newton today filed a divorce suit in the Cambridge Superior Court against Mae Grebenstein, charging her with cruel and abusive treatment.

The couple were married on May 20, 1917, and have lived in Brookline and Newton.

KILL 447 IN IRISH POGROMS IN 2 YEARS

In a statement issued by the Dail Eireann publicity department in London the number of killed and wounded in the northern counties of Ireland since pogroms against Catholics commenced on July 21, 1920, is given as 447 killed and 1,793 wounded.

Winston Churchill, speaking in the British House of Commons, is quoted as saying "Outside of the actual area of military operations, Ireland is running on normal lines. For the week ending July 22, the money collected by the Irish exchequer was 1,323,000 pounds equivalent to nearly $6,615,0000, the highest sum received in any week since the provisional government was set up."

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

(Now investigating conditions in the West.)

"Think of it! This whole part of the country was a desert until a short time ago," remarked Editor Fred Eldridge of Los Angeles, as he swept his hand across the place where this city stands.

"The country hereabouts is a natural desert, but it has been made into gardens and orchards and vineyards.

"Water has done it—irrigation."

An Easterner now living out here in the West told me with great gusto: "All you have to do here around your home is to turn on a hose and grow anything you wish."

Those of us who live in the East and have not enjoyed opportunity to travel, cannot grasp the part irrigation plays in the West. Harnessed water is the very life blood of California and other States in the West. Without means to obtain and carry water to be spread over fruit and farmlands, only deserts would bloom.

* * *

How much farther can California go in obtaining and harnessing water to supply industry and agriculture with the electric power needed to keep them going?

Before I came West I had heard little or nothing about the man who was most often mentioned to me in San Francisco—apart, that is, from banking leaders. This man is Wiggington E. Creed, president of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. Everybody in San Francisco has him marked as one of America's most promising "comers." I talked much with Mr. Creed about the future of electric power, about the raising of necessary capital and even more about the attitude of capital toward.

Here are statements made by this public utility giant who is likely to become a national figure:

"Prior to 1900 California was comparatively unimportant as a manufacturing State, but it now produces more manufactures than all the other Western States combined. This remarkable improvement in industrial position is directly traceable to the California oil industry, which began about 20 years ago to furnish cheap oil, from which cheap power could be developed. In the past, fully 60 per cent. of the power used in California has come from oil. But today the oil industry is carrying a burden beyond its capacity and must be relieved.

"The extent to which California can develop industrially with adequate water power is almost without limit.

"Careful studies indicate that there is possible of development in hydro-electric power in California 4,250,000 horsepower, of which only about 1,000,000 horsepower (a little over 10 per cent.) is thus far developed.

"The total maximum horsepower in water in the whole United States is 59,359,000, and in the eleven Western States is 42,850,000.

"The combined construction program of all the California power companies contemplate the development of about 2,000,000 horsepower in the next ten years. This development, if carried out, will require an expenditure of $500,000,000 to $800,000,000 during the period of construction."

Keystone Tire.

To J. K., Hull—Keystone Tire has declined to around a third of the high price of the year, danger signal enough for speculators, it seems to me. If you let an acquaintance have your money to invest at his discretion, the chances are that the acquaintance, money and you will soon be parted.

Dome Mines.

To P. W. S., South Boston.—Dome Mines, Ltd., have proved their speculative value by rising more than 10 points since this was pointed out in our Boston Notes, but it is now risky to forecast a quick rise. Their net profits for first four months of fiscal year beginning April 1 last were $831,709. This compares with $321,575 and $398,052 for corresponding periods in 1921 and 1920 respectively. July net profits were $192,755, against $205,659 in June and $85,878 in July, 1921. August earnings are running at record rate.

WHEAT SLIGHTLY OFF IN CHICAGO TRADING

Wheat opened in a slow trade in Chicago, a ¼ to ⅜ cent lower. Scattered selling was evident at the start because of the decline of ⅜ to 1 pence at Liverpool. Corn started unchanged to ⅜ cent lower. Liquidation in September oats was evident.

COTTON FUTURES MOVE IRREGULARLY

Cotton market was irregular in New York. October sold at 22.43, off one point; December, 22.35, off 3; January, 22.19, off 7; March 22.24, off 3; May 22.10, off 3; July, 21.96, up 2.

Nevada Has Loss

Nevada Consolidated second quarter report shows $234,218 loss.

RIGHTS TO NEW 'PHONE ISSUE ADVANCE

Features of trading in New York were the sharp rise in American Telephone, up 2 1-8 at 121 3-4, and the advance of U. S. Steel, up 1 at 105⅛, to a new high since 1920.

Rights to American Telephone's new stock issue turned smartly upward with a good turnover. Money renewed at 3½, then lifted to 4 per cent. There was a reaction on profit-taking and adverse news on the rail situation in the last hour, followed by a rally.

In the recessional one to two-point losses in the rails included Chicago and Northwestern, Great Northern preferred, Chicago & Alton, Northern Pacific, Union Pacific, Southern Railway and Wheeling & Lake Erie preferred.

National Lead set a record for all time on the upswing, rising 1⅝ at 103⅞.

Highs for 1922 were displayed by Cluett & Peabody, Manhattan certificates Allis-Chalmers, Crucible, United Retail Stores, Tobacco Products A. Vanadium, Stewart-Warner, Ann Arbor preferred, Central Leather, American Hide & Leather preferred, International Combustion, Columbia Gas, Consolidated Gas, Famous Players, Reynolds Tobacco B and Lima Locomotive.

Shippings were irregular. Marine preferred gained eventually, but a new year's low was made by International Corporation.

Savage Arms made a new low for 1922.

Point or better gains were made by Utah, Anaconda, Chino, American Car & Foundry, Baldwin, Bethlehem Steel B, Houston Oil, Kelly-Springfield Tire, U. S. Rubber, Producers & Refiners and Studebaker.

Invincible Oil was a leader in its group, up 1⅛ at 15⅝.

JOHN T. CONNOR CO. SHOWING GOOD MOVE

Steady rise in the common shares of the chain-store grocery concern, John T. O'Connor Co. on the Boston Stock Exchange from a low last January of 15⅝ to a high this week of 27½ is obviously discounting something more than mere earning power. At 27½ the stock, which pays $2 a share, is yielding only 8⅜ per cent.

The Connor Co.'s fiscal year ends April 1. In the 1922 fiscal period it earned $1.67 a share for the 90,000 shares of common after charging off the equivalent of $4 a share to inventory depreciation. For the first quarter of the new fiscal year ended July 1 it earned $1.06 a share and unless there is a most unexpected slump during the Winter it should earn between $3.50 and $4 a share for the full fiscal 12-month.

Inasmuch as the Connor Co.'s earning power, like that of all successful chain store systems, is steady and based moreover upon a very small margin of profit, directors are almost certain to take some action looking to an increased distribution to shareholders. Both an increased cash disbursement and a stock dividend have been rumored. Much more likely, however, is the sale of a small block of stock some time at a figure well below the market, thus creating a valuable "right."

It is doubtful if financing of this sort would run much over $250,000 as the company has no intention of expanding unduly fast. It now has 315 stores and is signing new leases every week, but only where rent and location are advantageous. It is still operating in a 60-mile radius of Boston. Eventually it plans 500 stores or more but the expansion will be worked out gradually.

Ray Consolidated Loses

Ray Consolidated Copper Co. for three months ended June 30, 1922, shows operating loss of $312,069.

BIG MEN

have always exercised a large influence over the Financial Markets. This is often manifested not only in the fluctuations of individual issues but in at least the minor movements of the general list.

If a big man dies, or if it becomes known he will GO TO EUROPE

there is frequently an immediate reflection in quotations; and someone has said, "If you would know markets, know the men who make them."

The outstanding feature of our weekly market news service just now is a series of intimate, human interest articles on sketching the careers of such men as James R. Keene, Jay Gould and others of heavy caliber in Stock Market battlings.

"STOCK MARKET OPERATORS"

A study of these articles may be as profitable as any "news," in attempting to analyse the underlying reasons for market happenings—although Redmond's Financial Weekly, in which "STOCK MARKET OPERATORS" is appearing, also contains a broad selection of the latest, more significant "NEWS" on active issues.

An excellent Market Letter with an unusually attractive feature. Copies On Request.

CAPITAL CHIEF CALLS HUB FIRE FORCE BEST IN COUNTRY

"WELL, FOLKS, I COPPED A PRIZE, I DID. THIS is Me in My Copping Clothes!" At top, little Valine Armstrong, who won the first award in the doll carriage parade at the Malden Playgrounds Demonstration, Ferryway Green. At bottom, a lively moment in a close obstacle race. Several thousand witnessed the events.

SO THIS is Boston! Miss Ruth Williamson, who has been shaking a mean hoof in a London musical comedy, was one of the attractive passengers aboard the S. S. Pittsburgh when she docked here. Boston will probably see quite a lot of her this season.

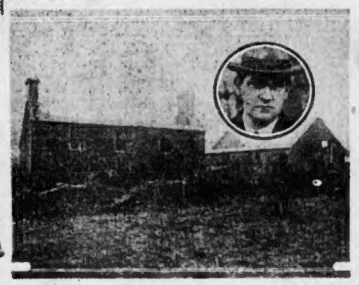

HERE ARE THE RELATIVES OF MICHAEL COLLINS, dead Irish leader. The insert is Sergeant Pat Collins of the Chicago police. On the left, seated, is the martyr's mother, Mrs. Mary M. O'Brien Collins. Next to her, holding her baby, is Mrs. Mary Powell, sister of Michael, and on the right is Mrs. Mary McCarthy, his grandmother.

BOSTON SPEEDS PLANS FOR MONSTER Memorial Services in Memory of Michael Collins! Above is shown the birthplace at Clonakilty, Cork, of the Irish patriot, the shell of which is all that remains standing today. A new and interesting character study of the slain chieftain is shown in the circle. It was taken a few days before he was killed.

NOW WE KNOW WHY so Many of Our Gentle Youth Turn Beach Comber! Here's one of the reasons. She picked up a $5 prize on the sands—jus' like that! Why don't you try. Today's winner, Miss Ada Fellows of No. 48 Sherman street, Roxbury, will be mailed a check for $5. Address your entries to Sea Beauty Editor, Boston American.

EXPLOSION AND FIRE PANIC IN NORTH END! Scores of women and children were thrown into panic by a fire, which followed an explosion in the tenement house at Nos. 17-19 Fleet street. "BOSTON HAS A FIRE DEPARTMENT SECOND to None in the Country!" This from Chief Thomas O'Connor of the Washington fire fighters ought to help bring down the insurance rate. First Deputy Chief Daniel P. Sennott, left, and Chief O'Connor are watching thirteen men perform hazardous stunts at fire headquarters.

"MAKE HAY WHILE THE SUN SHINES," WAS A GOOD OLD-FASHIONED Adage! Old-fashioned is right! New England farmers will be glad to know that old Sol is no longer absolutely necessary to dry their hay. Thousands of dollars are lost each year on New England farms when rain falls on newly-cut hay. This loss may be obviated by the use of the method devised by R. N. Mathews, which consists simply of a motor and a turbine fan. Damp hay may be made sweet within a few hours by turning on the "juice."

NEW HAVEN TRAIN TOPPLES OVER FIVE-FOOT EMBANKMENT. PHOTOgraph shows engine tender and cars which left the rails six miles from Newport, R. I. Six persons were injured, three seriously, and forty others were shaken up and bruised. A feature of the wreck was the sending of calls for help by radio. More than 100 autos were soon on the scene.

JOHNNY WILSON TO BEGIN NEW RING CAMPAIGN NEXT MONTH

BAN TO BE LIFTED ON MIDDLEWEIGHT BOSS

By JACK CONWAY.

Marty Killilea informs this writer that Johnny Wilson will engage in several minor bouts outside of decision areas before he enters a ring with a serious contender for the championship.

Marty Killilea.

"Wilson has not done a great deal of fighting for a year," said Killilea. "It is natural that his long layoff should soften him up. Harry Kelly has put Johnny through a stiff course of training during the past month and by the middle of next month the champion will be reinstated by the various boxing commissions throughout the country with the exception of the one in New York. Consequently he will be able to get plenty of engagements.

"I would have liked to have started Wilson with Hambone Kelly here in Boston. Hambone is a rough, tough fellow. The fact he has knocked out twenty-six opponents gives his admirers plenty of reason for believing he would have a chance of scoring a victory against Wilson or any other fighter.

"Any ring warrior with a punch is dangerous. Of course, we figured that Johnny's skill and body punishment would beat Hambone, but it would probably have been a tough fight while it lasted. But as the Boxing Commission does not look favorably on a Wilson-Kelly bout, we shall have to look elsewhere for action.

Wilson Feels Sure He Can Defeat Rosenberg

"Wilson was at the ringside when Dave Rosenberg defeated Phil Krug for the championship of New York State. Although not one who is giving to boosting himself, Johnny didn't hesitate in stating he could defeat Rosenberg and Krug in the same ring on the same night.

"I think the New York Boxing Commission has injured its own prestige by attempting to make and unmake champions.

"The public recognizes Wilson as middleweight champion and will do so until such time as he is defeated in the ring.

"Meanwhile Wilson is getting fit and will prove to even the Doubting Thomases that he is every bit a champion."

Buddy Jackson to Take on Wills on Tuesday.

"Tut" Jackson, heavyweight from the Middle West, will have Harry Wills as an opponent in a fifteen round bout at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn next Tuesday night. The promoters are having a difficult task booming the match on account of the fact that Wills knocked out a young man by the name of Buddy Jackson the other night at Newark. Naturally a lot of fans will figure that Wills is making a tour with a sparring partner or that "Tut" is a flivver like Buddy. There's a lot in a name when it comes to putting the money in at the box office.

Buddy Jackson was an easy mark for Wills as predicted in this column. Of course there were sporting writers who fell for the bunk about how Jackson had crushed a lot of opposition in South American and European rings.

Pal Reed Will Soon Get Going Again

Pal Reed has recovered from the broken bones he suffered when he turned on one of his ankles in his bout with Mickey Walker. The popular Natick middleweight has started light training and is expected to resume ring warfare in two or three weeks. Pal will be prepared to take on Walker again after he has engaged in a couple of minor bouts.

LOUGHRAN EASY FOR GENE TUNNEY

Philadelphia, Aug. 25.—Former light heavyweight champion, Gene Tunney, was the winner of an eight-round set-to with Tommy Loughran at the Phillies' ball park. It was a knockdown, suffered in the first round by Loughran, that caused the decision to go against him.

The bout was hardly a minute old when Tunney caught Loughran with a straight right to the jaw and the Quaker boxer went down. The blow was delivered with all of Tunney's 175 pounds behind it, and Loughran landed on the floor with such force that he bounced right up again in a wobbly condition, but went down on one knee to take a count of nine.

Tommy was very careful after that and earned the second and third rounds by clever jabbing and straight-arm work.

Tunney did good work at the outset of the fourth session when he bounced a right to Tommy's jaw and used his superior weight in the clinches.

In the fifth Loughran sidestepped one of Tunney's leads and as Tunney sailed by him Tommy landed a smack on the back of the neck and Gene fell flat on his face.

The sixth was another bad round for Loughran, for Tunney caught him several times, as he was coming in, with rights and lefts to the face.

There was much clinching in the seventh and eighth rounds, and there was very little boxing in the last two sessions.

In the preliminaries Karl Baird and Kid Wagner battled to a draw.

After being floored with a left hook in the first round, Willie Hermann of Paterson, N. J., surprised everyone by lasting the scheduled eight rounds against Joe Tiplits.

Harry (Kid) Brown of this city won from Pal Moran of New Orleans in the final bout.

ROBINSON PUTS IT UP TO HAMBONE

George Robinson.

George Robinson, Cambridge middleweight, is one of those rare birds who believes that the best time for a fight is the present. Jim MacDonald, manager of Robinson, today made the following remarks:

"Now that Hambone Kelly cannot fight Johnny Wilson until he has proved his class, he must take on Georgs Robinson or some other man of acknowledged class. Robinson has beaten Wilson twice. Consequently he is the proper man to test Hambone's ability.

"If Kelly should win over Robinson, he would be in a position to demand consideration from Wilson. Of course if Robinson should win, the Cambridge negro would be the one to take the shot at the title.

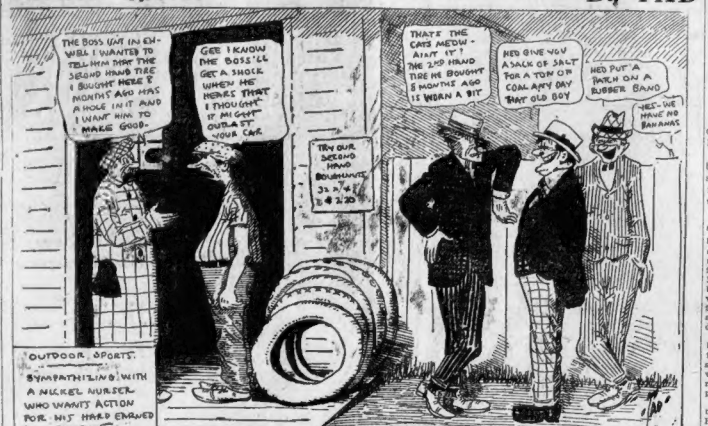

"Neither Robinson nor myself want to delay this match. The time for Hambone to fight is NOW. And the man who can beat him is Robinson."

Cambridge Red Sox.

The Cambridge Red Sox would like games for tomorrow and Sunday away from home with any of the fast teams in the State. Manager F. Cabanco, 15 Lincoln street, Cambridge. Telephone University 1779-J.

MOVE TO PUT ARMY-NAVY SPORTS ON FREE LIST

Washington, Aug. 25.—Return to the days of Grecian athletic glory, when the champion's award was a simple laurel wreath, instead of stars of diamond and gridiron "debasing their souls for the dollar," is proposed in a bill introduced in the House by Representative MacGregor, Republican, of New York.

Representative MacGregor's bill would make a start towards purity in sports by requiring all contests participated in by the West Points cadets and Annapolis midshipman to be open to the public without admission charge.

It would specifically forbid any cadet or midshipman to engage in any athletic game or contest where an admission fee is charged.

The New York congressman said his bill was prompted by "the growing spirit of commercialism in the military and naval academies of the United States," as emphasized by the price of tickets to the army and navy football game. He added:

"These institutions are public institutions, maintained from public funds. The young men are the chosen of the nation for preferment.

"It should be their ambition to show to the whole people the wonderful physical development that the bounty of the nation has made possible to them.

"The vast sums received for admission fees to their games would indicate that they are not filled with a desire to demonstrate their physical development, but rather that their attention is centered upon how much money they can get.

"It is only the rich who can afford to attend. I cannot picture such worldliness in the renowned Grecian or Roman athletic. Their games were open for all who came and their physical prowess was the glory of the State.

"The young men of West Point and Annapolis belong to the nation, and their gratitude for the opportunity given to them should not be marred by evidences of greed.

"The Grecian athlete was proud of his simple laurel wreath. Why should the American debase his soul for the dollar? I believe that the contests should be held. They are admirable incentives for effort, but I prefer that they should be public, open to the rich and poor alike, that the glory should be in the physical and not the financial success.

"If an appropriation from the public treasury is necessary, let it be done, but do not longer flaunt commercialism as the objective of those whose aim should be glory and pride."

DUNDEE WORKS HARD FOR MARTIN BOUT

New York, Aug. 25.—Johnny Dundee is getting ready in his usual quiet way for his battle Monday night at the Velodrome with Pepper Martin, which is announced to be for the junior lightweight title.

Dundee has been to the post so often, and with the best of battlers, that one fight is the same as another with him. Just the same, he never makes the fatal error of climbing through the ropes in poor shape which can be vouched for by his wonderful list of victories.

Dundee is doing most of his work at Orange, N. J., far away from the prying eyes of the public. Ever since he started on his meteoric career, Dundee has never been keen for doing real work before a throng. Not that he is bothered in the least, but simply because he wants to work without receiving too much free advice which is never of any account. Road work is what Dundee believes in.

Dundee doesn't indulge in much boxing, for he has no set style of fighting. He feels out his opponent and as he goes along, does the trick which generally counts. That this method is about the best has been proven repeatedly.

In all his fights Dundee shifts the manner of battle to suit himself. He seldom boxes a boxer, and naturally doesn't mix too closely with a slugger. That gliding, bouncing and rapid footwork of his most always brings home the palm of victory.

Dundee doesn't underestimate powerful hitting of Martin, seen Pepper in action, and convinced that the latter can a terrific walloping and then around and do some fierce hitting himself.

Martin is working like a beaver at Freddie Welsh's health farm aside Summit and is rounding into great shape. He is taking off the surplus poundage slowly.

U. S. TRACK LEADERS PLANNING FOR 1924 OLYMPIC GAMES

BRILLIANT ARRAY OF SPORTS IS PLANNED

Although the Olympic games, to be held at Paris, are nearly two years away, the plans are well advanced, the program is virtually complete and all indications point to an Olympiad surpassing any held before. This is the estimate of Allan H. Muhr, international secretary of the Olympiad, who came to this country as captain of the French Davis Cup tennis team, and is remaining in connection with his Olympic duties.

International representation will be greater than in any previous Olympiad, not only because new nations born out of the World War will carry their colors into the athletic arena for the first time but because older nations, especially those of South America will send teams for the first time. Japan, which sent only a handful of athletes to Antwerp, will be a real contender at Paris, the secretary said. Austria is already an entrant. Germany also may compete again.

The nation holding the games has the right to invite whom it will to compete, Secretary Muhr explained. "Germany's position in the society of nations will decide whether an invitation to that country shall be issued," he added.

The Olympic games centre in the events of track and field. For these a great stadium is under way at Colombes, to seat 60,000 persons. Colombes is three miles West of Paris, on the opposite side of the city from the Pershing Stadium, two miles East of Paris. This structure will be only one of three stadia on the fifty acre site, as swimming and tennis each will have a set of stands seating 10,000 persons. The tennis stadium will serve also as the scene of the fencing, wrestling, boxing and weight lifting competitions, for which the seating capacity may be increased by 5,000 more. In no previous games, according to Mr. Muhr, have the competitive fields been so well grouped.

Plan Adequate Quarters for the Athletes

The centering of activities extends also to the quartering of the athletes. The congestion of Antwerp will be obviated, and with it possibly much of the dissatisfaction felt in several countries, and the athletes will be kept close to their knitting by a project to house 1,500 of them in special structures on the Colombes plot. It is proposed to build 150 houses which, after the Olympiad, will be sold and utilized as workmen's homes to absorb some of the expense involved. Convenient to these and to the principal stadium a separate field with tracks and pits will be laid out for training purposes.

The athletic stadium will have a 500-metre track, with straightaways for the 100-metre dash and 110-metre hurdles events. Under the Olympic rules all other events will have at least one turn. The quarter-mile will be run with a single turn. Pits for jumping and vaulting will be plentiful. In the centre a football and rugby field will be laid out. A permanent water ditch for the steeplechase event will be a feature.

Seine to Be Scene of Rowing Races

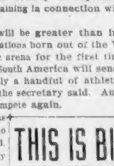

For rowing the River Seine will be the scene, with a straightaway of two miles, allowing four boats abreast.

These events, which in the popular mind comprise the Olympics, actually are only a few of the many competitions that will run through most of the year.

The Winter sports will have the call in January, to be held at Chamonix in the French Alps, under conditions that will make possible a concentration always lacking previously. Rugby in April, soccer in May (with forty to fifty countries already entered for play; polo in June, track and field in July, tennis to be arranged to follow the British championships at Wimbledon and to end in time for the title play in the United States; yachting at Meulin, polo in the Bois de Boulogne, rifle and trap shooting at Versailles, horse riding at the Grand Palais, all constitute an athletic calendar that will run through most of the twelvemonth.

THIS IS BIG NIGHT AT MEDFORD

Tonight is the night for Medford to turn out and see a real classy attraction. The Medford Lefty team is pitted against the strong House of David nine. They will battle on the Medford High School grounds.

Mayor Ben Haines

Mayor Haines of Medford will be on hand to see the whiskered nine from Benton Harbor, Michigan. "His honor" will toss out the first ball and start the fireworks.

This will be the first appearance in Medford of the bearded players, and credit is given to Nathan Thumin, who runs the Medford City team, for securing that attraction. Thumin has spent many sleepless nights trying to give the Medford fans good ball.

This diamond contest should draw fans from far and near, as it will be the only chance some of them will get to see this much-talked-of House of David. This club has a troupe of excellent ball players, for whom several of the big league clubs have been dickering.

Nathan Thumin.

Paul Mooney is rated as one of the best twirlers in the country, and is supported by a well-balanced club. Fact is the Hannaford brothers are a team in themselves.

A large gathering is expected when these clubs get together and start playing at 4 o'clock.

BAYSIDE NINE HAS TWO BIG GAMES

The people who are spending the few final weeks at the South Shore will be given a grand treat on Saturday and Sunday afternoon at the Bayside ball orchard. The Bayside team meets the Grow nine of Canton on Saturday afternoon and on Sunday will tackle the Brennan nine of Randolph in the same park.

F. L. Cronin

Manager F. L. Cronin of the Baysides is preparing to close his season and has secured these two banner good clubs to give the fans at the Summer resorts good games. On Saturday the Bayside team will have Bob Bagbrae on the slab against Jimmie Cassell, who will hurl for the Grow nine. On Sunday, Jack Fitzgerald, son of ex-Mayor Fitzgerald, will hurl, being opposed by "Cy Ippic" Gaw, who is slated to work for the Brennan Shoe nine.

The Baysides have an excellent record, having won four of the Jamaica Plain team, Daychester Town team, defeating the Fore River club twice, Hanover A. A. twice, Lafayette Council, Knights of Columbus, of New York city, twice.

MISKE-FULTON BATTLE TONIGHT

St. Paul, Aug. 25.—After having been postponed twice, the ten-round, no-decision bout between Fred Fulton, Minneapolis heavyweight, and Billy Miske of St. Paul is set for tonight at the local American Association Baseball Park.

The fight will be one of the most important heavyweight affairs held here for several years and the winner is expected to obtain a bout with Jack Dempsey, world's champion.

FOREIGN BIKE STAR GOING ON HIGH

CHARLES VERKEYN

YOUNG GOULD OUT FOR RING BOUT

"I just gotta fight in an awful hurry," whispered Young Gould as he hopped into the sporting department today. "The old arms are gettin' rusty from lack of use," continued the Brockton Wildcat. "I tell you I just gotta have a fight.

Young Gould.

"Course I know that none of you guys wanna fight outside of the typewriter league. But if you'll write a story 'bout me bein' eager to wallop somebody or other, maybe I'll get a big shot.

"Cy Goodwin tells me they wanna put me 'gainst Pete Hartley at Woonsocket and that Worcester promoters also wanna book me. But I'd rather show in Boston right away. Greek Algar or Harry Silva would do. Just tell those promoters to get in touch with Cy. Then I'll do the rest."

And he was gone like last week's pay.

CHELSEA KNIGHTS BATTLE MILLSTREAMS

Chelsea Knights of Columbus will play against the strong Millstream team on Sunday, August 27, at Carter Field, diamond No. 1, at 3:15 p. m. This is the first game of a three-game series between these teams. The batteries for Sunday will be, for the Knights, Strecker or Green and Cassanni, and for the Millstreams, Conley or Haydock and Dewire.

Cantabs Meet Haverhill

North Cambridge Knights of Columbus will entertain the Haverhill baseball club tonight at Russell Field. This is a banner attraction for Cambridge fans. "Chick" Davies is slated to twirl for Haverhill.

FURNITURE TEAM IN TITLE GAME

A large crowd will be on hand this evening at Ronan Park to watch the first game of the long-awaited series between Summerfield baseball club and Manning-Maxwell-Moore. The teams are [illegible] rivals and a hard battle is sure to be seen.

T. Connors and F. Connors will be the battery for Manning and "Wild Jack" McLaughlin and Patterson for Summerfield. The furniture boys are playing topnotch baseball just now, as they have won nine straight games, and intend to make it ten.

This will be the last game in which Al Ryan will be seen, as he leaves Sunday to accept a position as manager of a furniture house in Little Rock, Ark.

He has been the mainstay of the team in the hitting department and his absence will surely be felt keenly.

The team has plenty of reserve strength, with L. Roberts at second, Bob Steinberg at short and Cuneo in centre. Ward, at third, has played errorless ball all season, and the work of H. Ryan and C. Roberts has been of big league calibre.

Game will start at 5:30 to insure nine innings.

PAIR OF TOUGH GAMES FOR SOMERVILLE

The Magoun Square Civic Club of Somerville, which has been putting up a slashing brand of ball all Summer, has a couple of hard contracts on its hand for the week end.

Tonight, the Civics entertain the strong Malden Town Team and tomorrow afternoon the Winthrop Legion will be the attraction. Both games will be staged at the Richard Trum Playground.

The well-known locals will have to travel at top speed to turn back the Malden and Winthrop boys, but Manager Regan feels that his team is capable of turning the trick when he shoots Westland or Rice at the Malden outfit and Eric Laird at the Winthrop boys.

Supreme! Fine clean long filler.

BARGAIN BILL FOR BIKE FANS AT REVERE

With only a few more weeks of the bicycle season remaining, Manager Butler is planning several added attractions in connection with the regular card of racing. Tomorrown night Nat has booked three feature events.

Willie Spencer, recognized as the world's premier sprint cyclist by virtue of his win of the American sprint championship, will make his second appearance of the season. He will be opposed by Frank Cavanaugh, the giant Irishman, who has such a large following among the Revere fans.

An Australian unlimited pursuit race between Ralph Spiers and Archie McDonald should develop some good racing.

A 35-mile motor paced race between George Chapman, Vincent Madonna and Charles Verkeyn is the main event.

Verkeyn, by his sensational riding of late, has annexed six consecutive victories. It will be recalled that near the finish of last season's racing the Belgian was winning all the titular events. This year has turned out in the same manner and is now displaying the ability that has made him such a favorite in Europe.

MALDEN TACKLES REVERE AGAIN

The management of the Malden City Club has made arrangements to take care of the largest crowd of the season for the game with the Revere K. of C. at Ferryway Green this evening. This is the second game of a series, Revere having won the first, 7 to 1, and Malden with five straight victories, out to even matters.

TWO GAMES IN TWILIGHT LEAGUE

There will be two good Twilight league games tonight. One will be staged at the John W. Murphy, Jr., Playgrounds, on Carolina avenue. The other will be played at Little River Playgrounds, Lynn, when the J. J. Connelly club will play the Cornet All Stars, of Lynn.

This will be the third contest for the Connelly club this week, and at the rate they have been traveling of late, will give the best clubs in the league plenty of action.

The invincible "Bings" King is slated to mount the slab for the Roxbury outfit. The infield, with Representative Jim Mulvey on third; Bill Walsh at short, Lenny Rond, formerly of St. Andrew's A. A., covering the keystone sack, and Paul Geary of Reading, who is covering the initial sack, is a fast quartet.

The outfield has been greatly strengthened with the addition of Jackie Mahoney of the St. Andrew's A. A., in right garden; Mike Nichols in left and "Dutch" Ward, who is without a doubt the greatest gardener in the league, in centre field.

The fans of Forest Hills and Jamaica Plain will see the St. Joseph's club of Somerville at the John W. Murphy, Jr., Playgrounds. This will be a stubborn [illegible] honors as the St. Andrew's club needs every game if it wishes to get back on top of the well known ladder.

Norumbega Meets Natick

This evening at Norumbega Park the Norumbega team will play the second game of its series with the Natick town team. Norumbega has defeated Newton Legion, Saxony Mills, Newton Upper Falls and others.

SEMI-FINALS IN NATIONAL TENNIS PLAY AT CHESTNUT HILL

FOUR BIG FEATURE MATCHES ON TODAY

By FRED C. LANE

Just what are the prospects of Australia's doubles team, Gerald Patterson and Pat O'Hara Wood, winning the Davis Cup doubles match next week at Philadelphia will be sounded out today when they meet Nat Niles and Jean Borotra in the semi-final rounds of the National Doubles Tournament at Chestnut Hill.

Following this important affair, William Johnston, with his partner, Wallace Johnson, will battle with the Tilden and Richards combination for the right to play in the final rounds tomorrow.

This contest promises to be the best match staged to date at the new courts. Johnston and Johnson made their way to this stage after the hardest sort of fight. They won over the Kinsey combination only after the match had gone to five sets.

The Steeplechase

Six little horses at the post arrive.
One of them won't get away,
And now there are but five.

Five little horses—hear the people roar!
One falls at the Liverpool,
And now there are but four.

Four little horses running merrily.
Jockey Jones drops off of one,
And now there are but three.

Three little horses fencing straight and true.
Jockey Jinks "takes" one of them,
And now there are but two.

Two little horses making quite a run,
A jockey grabs another,
And now there is but one.

One little horse just about all in,
Gosh, what an awful time
They had to make him win!

The more we see of these second Second Mans 'o War—or perhaps we should say "Man o' Wars"—the more we think of those second Cobbs and second Mathewsons that we have been hearing about in baseball for the past decade.

Dempsey Willing to Go to South America

New York, Aug. 25.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, is willing to go to South America either this Fall or next Spring to meet Luis Angel Firpo, holder of the South American crown, and Tex Rickard, noted promoter, is willing to stage the bout.

After a conference with Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, Rickard announced this afternoon that the suggested match depends on Firpo.

Some time ago Rickard declared that he was too busy in the United States to take a flier below the equator and earlier than that Kearns declared that Dempsey had a $500,000 offer to go to Argentina, but would not accept it.

SARAZEN SETS DIZZY PACE FOR GOLFERS

By NICK FLATLEY

Gene Sarazen, our open and professional champion, showed Boston why he owns so many titles. Gene was decidedly and distinctly the hero of the big match at Charles River, in which he teamed with Francis Ouimet, and defeated Walter Hagen and Joe Kirkwood, three and two.

We are speaking advisedly when we say he defeated them, for he did that little thing. Ouimet was decidedly off his usual brilliant game, and Gene was playing the best ball of the tourists practically all the time.

That fact didn't worry the new champ in the least, and he breezed around the difficult course in 72 strokes, just three better than the record his partner established a week or so ago.

Hagen, Kirkwood and Ouimet were wild and uncertain, but Sarazen was straight as a string all the way, as steady as a bill collector's visits, and he made some 2,000 mountain climbers wonder why they ever thought golf was a difficult game.

He hit his wooden shots high and far, right down the fairways. On the short holes he was always on in one. His approaches were deadly accurate and [illegible] right for the pin and stopping dead. All in all he's what you might call a regular golfer.

Charles River's Long and Narrow Course Real Test

That Charles River layout is one real test, an unusually long and narrow course. The greens are the biggest in the State, but they're slippery and surrounded by traps and trouble. The terrain, being new, is quite rough in spots. One or two greens are patchy.

But Sarazen, who never saw this part of the country before, made the journey out in 34, and came home in 38 for his 72, which is one under par. And the par was figured for the time a couple of years hence when the greens will be velvety and the fairways smooth and rolling.

Three short missed putts on the return journey prevented the new champ from hanging up a record that would stand a lot of battering and assaulting. As it is, it'll be quite a time before anybody cracks his mark on a course that requires championship play, if ever one does.

Sarazen Is a Very Confident and Picturesque Golfer

Sarazen, who is twenty-one years old, is a very confident and optimistic golfer, picturesque, too. He wasn't brilliant, because he didn't have to be—he wasn't in real trouble all afternoon and there were plenty of [illegible] bither and yon for the poorly hit shot.

He plays the game as though he knew he could do anything required. He isn't the least bit puffed up by all the fame that has popped his way in a couple of months. He wears a confident grin, and the fact that his opponents are the greatest in the game means nothing apparently in his young life.

Gene has a lot of the mannerisms of Hagen, especially on the greens. He gets the line of putt very carefully, sighting the hole and ball from all conceivable points. He's very careful to dust off anything that looks like an obstacle. Once he gets his ideas settled he steps up and hits the ball—hits it up there, always.

Shooting Off the Green He's Amost as Fast as Duncan

Shooting off the green, Sarazen is almost as fast as Duncan. There is very little delaying, or practice swinging in his game. He has his shot all played before he gets to the ball, and the motions are merely afterthought, apparently.

We seem to have been talking Sarazen quite voluminously, [illegible] other stars are more or less familiar anyway, and he was the whole match besides. It wouldn't have been close even had not a couple of Hagen approaches, slammed too courageously, carromed off the pop place, and toward the pin, instead of tirckling merrily over the greens, down the hills and far away.

The Valley of Silent Men

A LOVE STORY OF THE FAR NORTH

HE held the fatal strands in his hand as he spoke: "Jacque, did you kill John Barkley?"

The glance that met his own was as fearless and honest as the glance of the trapper should be. "No," said Jacque Radisson.

Do you know who did kill him?" asked Kent, nerving himself to stand in spite of his wound.

Again the calm reply came from Jacque: "I don't know."

The trapper of men sank back to the settee with the strands of black hair in his hand. "Jacque, you you've got to take me back with you—"

"You don't think I did it," asked Radisson, his eyes still fixed with their steady light on those of his suffering friend.

"No, I don't," answered Kent, "but it's got to be [illegible]." He sank back with a moan, and Jackue Radisson ministered to the man who was ready to take him back to the northernmost post of the Mounted—to the domain ruled by the Iron Man of the North, Inspector Kedsty.

Help came sooner than either man expected. A horse turned loose by the trapper followed back on the trail and came head on to another horse—this one wearing a rider—Bucky O'Connor, loyal friend of Kent.

O'Connor seized the runaway's bridle rein and drew his own conclusions. Kent was either wounded or dead. O'Connor knew of the hunt for the fur thief and his heart raged as he wondered whether a bullet from ambush had laid his friend low.

He pushed on with both horses, keeping his eyes on the trail of hoof marks. The day was before him but he did not spare his steed nor horse.

His shadow darkened the door of the shack long before sunset and Kent's eyes lit with delight as he saw him.

"It's you, Bucky O'Connor," he cried, making a sincere effort to stand.

The other pushed him back. His eyes fastened on Radisson and then on the figure on the floor.

It was plain enough. [illegible] Radisson of [illegible] Barkley and of wounding Kent.

"This fellow?" he pointed. "He did this?"

"No, he didn't shoot me," Kent broke in—"a fur thief did it—that we see, after [illegible]

THE STORY SO FAR.

James Kent, of the Northwest Mounted Police, has been sent out to track a fur thief. Kent is known as one of the bravest and most resourceful of the famous force.. He meets Pierre, an old man, called "the Prophet," and asks him for information, but gets none. The fur thief spots Kent, dodges into the scrub and shoots him from ambush. Kent manages to reach a shack on the trail and finds a trapper there.

O'Connor nodded and jerked his head toward the prone figure.

"And Barkley?"

"I don't know," said Kent.

"Shot?" asked his pal.

Kent held up the cord of hair.

O'Connor started. "That strand of hair again," and he turned to Radisson. "So you're the man."

Jacque Radisson shook his head.

"No?" said O'Connor. "Well, who did, then?"

"He didn't," said Kent.

"He'll have to show the Inspector," remarked O'Connor, "as soon as you're well enough to move."

"That'll be tomorrow, Bucky—I'll get into the Post Hospital with [illegible]."

Kent remembered that ride back to the Far North Post; a ride of agony for him, with O'Connor trying to cheer him on and Radisson taking the march without a word.

Only when they reached the Post and the wounded man was being brought to the hospital did Jacque Radisson receive word of hope. He got it from Kent himself. "I know you didn't do it, Jacque—a life for a [illegible] very."

They led Jacque to the prison and [illegible], while Kent was left to the mercies of the post doctor.

Bucky O'Connor reported duly to the Inspector, who listened with no sign of approval or disapproval.

"This Radisson is in the prison?"

"Yes, sir."

"And Kent's in the hospital?"

"Yes, sir."

"Ask Dr. Cardigan to come over when he's finished."

O'Connor saluted and went out; the doctor, an elderly man who had made an exhaustive examination of Kent's wound, came in some minutes later.

"Well, what's the verdict?" asked Kedsty.

"Nicked a heart artery, Inspector; he can't possibly live a week."

Kedsty showed no concern. "I'll go over with you—have you told him?"

"No, I waited for orders."

"Might as well let him know—there may be something he'll want to do—he's entitled to send word to his people."

The two men left Kedsty's house together.

The men of the North face death every day in one form or another; to them it is a part of the game, a passing on; neither Kedsty nor the doctor had any scruples about giving Kent the fatal information.

The appearance of the Inspector with the doctor caused O'Connor to lift his eyes.

"How are you, Kent?" asked Kedsty.

"Pretty well, sir, considering—"

"Nasty wound you've got I hear," continued the commander.

"I imagine so."

"The doctor wants to tell you more about it—of course, you'd like to know."

There was something ominous in his voice. Kent had a foreshadowing of what was coming. He turned his eyes to Cardigan. "You think I'm badly hit," he asked.

"I'm afraid you're very badly hit," he said.

"Well Doc, spill it out—"

"You may last a week, Kent—no more."

The bare announcement—this sentence of death—shook the young man; he repeated after Cardigan "a week" and stared at the ceiling as though counting the hours that lay between him and the great beyond.

Bucky O'Connor, with a movement of sympathy, took his hand. The pressure brought Kent back to reality.

He turned his eyes toward the doctor. "There's no mistake, is there?"

Cardigan shook his head. "Not the least, I wish there was."

"In that case," said Kent slowly, "there's Jacque Radisson."

"What about him?" asked Kedsty sharply.

"I found him in the hut where Barkley was killed and Kent was wounded," broke in O'Connor.

"And he's in the guard house now," said Kedsty.

O'Connor nodded. "The queer thing about it—he denies doing the killing—"

"Shot?" The single interrogation came from Kedsty.

"No; that's the strange part of it. He was strangled with a cord of hair just like Cutler—you remember Cutler?"

"Enough of this," said Kedsty. "Keep him behind the bars." His jaw was set and his eyes betrayed a fearful glint as though the name and the manner of the killing of Barkley had brought up an unpleasant memory.

He started to go, when Kent's voice stopped him. "One minute, Inspector. Radisson didn't strangle Barkley." Kedsty shuddered slightly.

"How do you know he didn't?"

"Because I did it myself."

The Inspector halted in his tracks, one hand on the door, and the doctor leaned forward incredulously.

"You're a damned [illegible]," said Kedsty with incisiveness, "[illegible] you know it."

Kent smiled. "I'm on my back," he said slowly. "You've got the advantage of me, Inspector, but just the same I want to make a confession."

"Good Lord, you're crazy," groaned Bucky, who did not believe his friend any more than Kedsty or the doctor did.

"Maybe," answered Kent. "But if I've got to go why not go with the truth behind me? Why [illegible] a [illegible] for something I did not do?"

"You're going through with this then?" asked Kedsty, squaring his shoulders.

"I'm going through, Inspector."

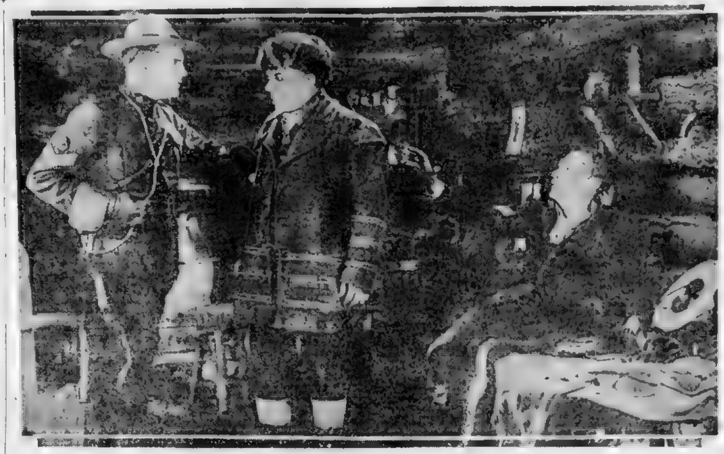

Kedsty went out and the doctor followed. Bucky O'Connor burst forth into a volley of protest. "What's come over you, Kent? You didn't strangle that crook any more than I did and you know it. You're trying to save Radisson—it's tit for tat now, isn't it?"

"You know me," said Kent. "I said I did it, didn't I?"

The Inspector, much as he preferred to think [illegible] was the murderer of Barkley, could do nothing in the face of Kent's sudden demand to confess to the crime.

He brought a paper to him, written out and ready for signatures and witnesses.

Desert Love

by Joan Conquest

She trusted herself with a Sheik in the lonely desert—

WOULD YOU?

Jill Carden, a beautiful and daring young English girl, brought up in a conventional home, burns her bridges behind her and lives in an oasis, far from her own race, for the love of an Arab chief. She was seventeen, motherless and much sought after by reason of her great wealth, which, however, disappeared when her father's will was read. After getting a position as traveling companion she finds herself at Suez. She gets her first glimpse of Hahmed, the Camel King, and tosses a coin to decide whether she shall speak to him or go back to England. It falls heads and she is committed to the Sheik and the desert. The caravan starts for the oasis, with Jill riding a camel.

TO her everlasting undoing, the camel paused for one moment to stretch her neck at length and eye the new menace. A fatal delay in which the offending object alighted upon and around her head, shutting her completely in, like a lamb whilst hobbles were placed about her feet; after which the shade was lifted slightly, leaving eyes covered, whilst the blood-soaked thong was cut away from the torn flesh, and a kind of leather cage slipped over the muzzle, which would certainly prevent her from biting, or indulging in her usual wide yawn of indifference.

The covering being lifted from her eyes, her bonds were undone, and herself likened by the maker of sweet music, unto all that the Koran calls unclean, even unto the vilest of vile, the dog, into the company of which she was relegated for all eternity. She was then ordered to ground in a manner reminiscent of the tones used to bazaar dogs which order was emphasized with a flick of the courbaash upon a part which had known the meeting of Howesha's teeth.

But when at sunset Jill opened her eyes all sounds and signs of battle were stilled.

The sun was sinking when Jill moved; stretched a little, half opened her eyes, and closing them turned over and went to sleep again for about two minutes.

Then she half opened her eyes again, stretched out her hand to pull uncomprehendingly at the white netting round her bed through which she could see a blaze of red, gold and purple; and laughing in the vacant manner of the delirious, or those but half awake, tried to collect her thoughts sufficiently to explain the strangeness of her surroundings, sitting up with a jerk as the doings of the last 24 hours suddenly stirred in her awakened mind.

Wide-eyed she sat with her hands clasped round her knees, whilst the deadly stillness seemed to rise as a wall around her, cutting her off from laughter, love, and life, until wild unreasoning fear, seizing her very soul, caused her to tear and rend the mosquito nets, and force a way through them and out of the tent.

For a while she stood holding to the tent rope, looking this way and that for the sign of some living thing. Before her stretched one vast plain of gravel, miles upon miles of it receding into nothingness, on each side the same, behind her tent above, the palm trees waving gently in the evening breeze and above again a sky such as is to be seen only in this part of the world, for travel you ever so widely you will find nothing to rival a desert sunset in its design and color.

Above her head seemed to be stretched a canopy, made by some Eastern magic, of a mixture of colors woven by the hands of Love and Hate, Passion and Revenge, underneath which she stood disheartened, dishevelled, in crumpled clothes and shoeless feet, with fear-distended eyes in a fatigue-shadowed face, searching vainly for something alive and near be it human, dog, horse or camel.

Owing to a sudden nervous reaction brought about by the cessation of all physical and mental effort, the girl's power of reasoning had gone, along with her will, her common sense, and her fearlessness.

That there was another tent beside her own made no more impression on her mind than the fact that a slight smoke haze softened the intense blue of the sky on her right.

She was absolutely terrified and ravenously hungry, also unwashed, therefore altogther unhappy, so with no more ado she flung out her arms, and with a great sob rushed headlong into that which frightened her most, the unlimited, uninhabited desert.

Her shoeless feet made hardly a sound as she sped like a deer from the desolation she imagined to the certain desolation death in front of her, but she had hardly cut her little feet over more than twenty yards when Hahmed, the swiftest runner in Egypt, was speeding after her.

"Allah! Be merciful to me! For behold I fail to keep from harm that which Thou hast placed in my keeping," he murmured, as he ran abreast with the girl for a few yards, then putting his arm around her lifted her off her feet, holding her gently to him, and speaking no word until the paroxysm of sobs had subsided.

"Where to fly you, O' woman and whyfore are you thus afraid?"

"I was simply terrified. I—I—you had left me all alone to die, and I just ran and ran to find someone or something else beside myself in the desert," answered a voice, muffled by the snowy garments of the man who held her so gently against his heavily beating heart.

"I will take you back to your tent, to the bath and repast which await you. I dared not loosen your raiment without your permission, so having removed the shoes from off your feet, laid you upon your bed, but when you are bathed, I pray you wrap yourself in the soft garments you will find, and clapping your hands make known to your slave that you are ready to eat."

"Oh there is a servant to wait on me. I thought we were quite alone."

"I am your slave," simply replied the Arab, as he placed Jill upon her feet in front of her tent, where she stood with her hand on his arm, rooted to the spot by the glory of the sky, whilst the man gazed down upon her, as the dying sun struck the gold of her hair, the blue of her eyes, and the cream of her neck.

"You who are of those who are versed in music and of those who can make poetry, describe that glory to me," imperiously demanded Jill, after a moment of silence, with that suddenness and complete change of mood which falls occasionally upon all women, causing the meek to scratch like cats, and the strong to give in, often to their everlasting undoing.

"Bathe the white body of thy beloved in the blue-green of Egypt's river, so that the coolness and fairness may give delight to thee! Drape the satin veil of deepest blue about the red glory of thy love's hair, and bind a band of gold, set deep in sapphires, above the twin pools of heaven, which are her eyes. Set turquoise, threaded with finest gold, a-swing in the rose-leaf of her ears, to fall and wind about the snow of her white neck.

"Fasten the blue flower which smiles upon thee from the shelter of the golden corn within the glory of her hair.

"Perfume her hair and her breasts, anoint her hands and her feet, and wrap thy delight in a garment of passion, sparing not the shades therein, for in them shalt thou find thy delight.

"Let the garment be heavy with the gold of love, rich with the purples of passion, afire with the crimson of thy desire, forgetting not the caress of the rose, nor the light mingling of opal and saffron, and the faint touch of amethyst and topaz, in which shall she find her delight.

"Bind thy love with the broad bands of the setting sun so that she cleaves unto thee and carry her unto the twilight of thy tent, which shall slowly darken until the roof thereof is swathed in purple gloom, through which shall shine the stars of thy beloved.

"And there lie down in thy delight, until the hour of dawn calleth thee to prayer."

The voice was stilled, whereupon Jill lifted her face bathed in rosy color, which might or might not have been the reflection from the sky, whilst her red mouth quivered ever so slightly and her great blue eyes looked for a moment into those of the man, and as quickly looked away.

So seductive was she in her youth and utter helplessness that the man stepped back two paces, and saluting her for whom his whole being craved, gathered his cloak about him and departed to his tent.

And Jill also entered her tent, and having earlier and under the lash of terror departed therefrom in blind haste, stood amazed.

She had imagined a mattress, a rug, an earthenware basin on the ground, and sand over everything, and on the top of the sand scorpions, spiders, and all that creepeth and flieth both by day and by night. Not at all.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES—BY ANN LISLE

"YOU'VE made good already, Babbsie. When folks who know you at close range want to trust their business and their money to you, you have proved what you're made of. Now, go on making good and making your [illegible] proud of you."

AFTER A SWEET GOOD-BYE, I TURNED FROM THE TELEPHONE

After a sweet good-bye, I turned from the telephone.

Phoebe and Neal were standing over in a wide window, staring across the city. His arm was across her shoulders. Her head rested against him. In the grace relaxation of their quiet pose, there was confidence and love and understanding. I realized that, having each other so completely, nothing else mattered much.

And in the moment when I knew success was assured me, I knew that I'd gladly give it all just to stand for one moment locked in Jim's arms.

When I got home from my wonderful evening with Phoebe and Neal, I found Carlotta's room dark and still. So I tip-toed past her closed door. When I got to my room I found a note on my dressing table. And as I read it I was deeply thankful that I hadn't disturbed Carlotta.

"Let me have the first word—and the last—on the mater that's in both our hearts," her note read. "I'm ambitious. I want to see the business which came down to me from my father foremost among the realty corporations in this city. And—'It pays to advertise.' So, in view of the fact that my business judgment tells me you're a 'wiz,' why shouldn't you get the account?

"Moreover, my dear, I like having a part in the success of my best friend. And you mustn't lose sight of the fact that Tony is close to your business and that I like being close to—what interests him. I'll see you next at Virginia's. I'm going to rush down to the office in the wee sma' hours of the morning to get work out of the way before starting on my ride with Tony. Thank Pat if you like—or your own blessed young Neal. But please, dear, don't make a fuss over me. I'd feel so awkward and I'd make a holy show of myself.

"Just go on loving the girl into whose life you've brought its first happiness and out of whose life you've driven the bluff of loud laughter that covered—emptiness. Yours, with eternal gratitude.

"CARLOTTA

"P. S.—And the old Carlotta writes this with her tongue in her cheek—I think I owe you a heap for teaching me to wear orchid chiffon instead of black and white plaids. We aren't square yet. What you owe me is—no brass bands! I know you and so I beg you please not to be too—darn grateful. C. S."

I finished with laughter bubbling from my lips and tears trembling on my lashes. That note was a bit of Carlotta set down on paper.

"Carlotta's own engagement present to herself!" I declared whimsically, borrowing my tone and attitude from her.

Then I tucked myself off to bed. But for a time I didn't try to sleep. Instead, I lay in the cool darkness staring ahead and wondering why I wasn't completely happy. I balanced all the wonderful things on the credit side of my ledger. Neal and Phoebe are happy. Carlotta and Tony have all the beauty in the world just around the turn of the road. Success is mine now just for the effort to win it.

But what does the future hold for Jim and me? If I could find him and creep into his arms and tell him in my own way of the queer little prodigal father who has come back into my life, all would go well. But if Rosa Cordova manages to reach Jim before I do—I wonder if she can effort to win it.

As long as I have this unanswered question in my heart, how can success and the happiness of those dearest to me counterbalance my loneliness and my fear that there's worse loneliness ahead?

Pondering this, I must have fallen asleep—for suddenly streaming golden sunlight awoke me and I knew it was time to pull myself out of bed, pack for the trip, dress and hurry down to the office.

Miss May was there when I arrived, and I proceeded to tell her my wonderful news.

Blood So Thin Could Not Keep Warm Says Wincarnis Helped Him

"The day I first heard of Wincarnis was certainly a lucky one for me," writes Mr. William Field, of 306 West 19th Street, New York. "For months I had been in a terribly weak and run-down condition. I was so weak, in fact, that when on my feet, I always felt as if my legs were just about to double under me. I was as pale as a ghost. My blood was so thin that no matter how much clothes I would put on I could not seem to be able to keep warm in the cold weather. I could not eat much and what I did eat seemed to do me no good.

No matter what I took I got no better. And I had been that way for so long that I began to think I would never get well again, for I am close on to sixty. But one day a friend who had taken Wincarnis with great benefit after a bad case of the 'Flu' recommended the preparation so enthusiastically to me that I immediately bought a bottle.

Before I had taken half the bottle, I realized that at last I had found something that was doing me good. I improved so fast, it was simply marvelous. Less than three bottles of Wincarnis have made me feel like a new man. Wincarnis is certainly a wonderful tonic and I hope you can manage to get everybody to know of it."

"Mary" ROMANCE OF A BOSTON BUSINESS GIRL

By Elenore Meherin

Start This New Story Today

MARY KELLY wins the post of private secretary to HALL DAWSON, a dynamic promoter with offices in Water street. She instinctively fears him. After the conclusion of a big deal he calls her his mascot and gives her a check for $100, which she accepts with misgivings. Reassured by Dawson, however, she plunges into her work, dreaming of the day she will be his partner. The next deal concluded, she expects another bonus check, but finds it is for only $30. While she is debating whether she will resign, MRS. HALL DAWSON enters and tries to find out Mary's regard for her employer. Mary's adviser is her sister, JUNE. Mary goes to see the parade of the returning Yankee Division and meets PAT SULLIVAN, her childhood sweetheart. Dawson has the "flu" and Mary is summoned to his beautiful mansion on Bay State road. She sees Pat riding with Teresa Brady. Now go on with the story.

"WHY are you angry with me, Pat?" In a quick impulse that surprised myself I put out my hands to him. He looked at me amazed.

"I'm not angry, Mary. I didn't expect the snub from you; that's all!"

"Snub! I was just overjoyed to see you."

"So much so you hid in an al... don't phone when I leave my ..."

"Oh Pat! I didn't get that number. If you only knew——" For a ... then I rushed headlong into explanation.

And I thought it was because I'm poor, Mary." He put his hand on mine.

I'm poor too, Pat," I said, for once proud of the fact. "Why, I had to be sewed into this dress at ... minute."

And I'm hired into mine!" He looked me over. "You're just the same old Mary." The warm gladness in his voice thrilled me. ... we got ten years to talk ...

We were sitting opposite a long ... I looked ... to see Teresa Brady's flame- ... and came with swift grace toward us.

"Sorry to intrude, Miss Kelly." She turned to Pat. "Wicked boy, this is the supper dance!"

... at once. "Beg pardon, your majesty. Come, Mary, we'll find Mr. Mahoney for you."

"Send him to me, Pat," I urged as he looked down, smiling at me.

"Hurry, Pat!" Teresa took his arm and looked at him with an air of ownership.

I watched them walk off. She was in love with him. She meant to marry him.

"Like a king and queen and I'm the beggar maid," I thought as I watched those two magnificent creatures crossing the hall. Pat, ... with youth, his fine head thrown back—and Teresa, dark, striking, sauntering in her warm, sensuous thought, "per- ... in charm."

They passed through the parlor into the dining room. Ripples of laughter, snatches of "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles" filtered through the heavy portieres. I was alone in the stately old reception hall.

"Jack can't find me here. Pat must have forgotten to tell him," I thought, chilled with the fear that some one might come out and find me sitting there. I decided to go upstairs and wait till the supper was over. I started up, took a few quick steps.

"What d'ye mean, Friend Wife!" Jack hurried out from the parlor and caught my arm briskly. "I'll file charges of desertion."

"I'll counter it with charges of grossest neglect."

"And you'll be cut off without a cent."

"Then I'll starve to death and you'll go down to posterity with the brand of Cain on that nice white forehead."

"Making fun of my peachy complexion, are you? I'm my mother's joy, Miss Kelly."

We were in the parlor.

"How would you like to go to Gloucester next Saturday and Sunday? I've got a cottage up there. Nell and Tram are coming, and a few others—Mr. Baldwin and Evelyn."

He threw back his head and laughed merrily.

"What fun to ring you in on those two. Like to come?"

"Oh, I'd love it. I'd almost die of joy. Do you mean it honestly?"

"You poor kid!" he repeated, laughing and taking my hand. "Of course I mean it. You talk to Nell. Just bring an old waist and skirt."

I felt as though I were floating in the dining room, riding on a fluttery pink cloud.

"Sit here, Jack Mahoney," Mrs. Baldwin, talkative, overcorseted woman with a fat hand and a large blonde head, motioned to the chairs next to hers.

"Yes, mamma," he mocked in a loud whisper I feared she would overhear. "Son is coming."

"Comfortable, wifie? Then cast your sweet, violet lamps around and I'll make you acquainted with this select gathering. See that mongrel opposite devouring the chicken—the fowl, not the lady—his father made his pile boiling babies up for soap and in his next life the babies'll turn around and boil him down for tallow dips to light dungeons with.

"And see that cross-eyed marvel next him? He looked the wrong way in his past life so they twisted his eyes this shot. That's why I'm handsome and have a nice forehead. I led a good life yesterday. I'm reaping my reward today."

"And I suppose I was a thief and a spendthrift and robbed widows and orphans, so I'm poor today?"

"I hate to say it, little pulse of my heart, but you must have been a wild one—a Lady Raffles, perhaps like that Pat Sullivan that our friend Teresa is ogling. He was a terrible villain—even stole the bread from hungry children's mouths.

"Now he's going through their misery as a punishment. Craves culture, money, power and has to live in a shack at Lynn and work for the Electric Company."

"I don't believe he's so poor. He went to Plattsburg and won a commission in the army. It takes money to get that far."

"Yes, Love's Delight, but he came back from France to find his devoted father out of a job, his little sister hungry and his mother dissolving in tears. He takes the only quick road to wealth open to him and gets a job there."

I was glad Jack was in such a rambling mood. It gave me a chance to look at Pat, to wonder about him without interruption. There was about his vivid young face an attitude of strength, of nobility, of passionate earnestness. He was talking to Teresa.

"They're engaged, aren't they?" I could mask my voice with Jack. He didn't guess that I was interested in Pat.

"No, but they will be. Life would not dare deny Teresa anything. If she asked for a star to wear in her hair, Old Man Brady would fetch it down for her."

"I suppose she was an angel in her yesterday?"

"No, woman, you don't read the cards aright. I was one of the few angels. Teresa was only one of the longers. She just longed and longed for things, and now she's got them."

Maybe Pat Sullivan only longed for money and that's why he's going to Marry Teresa Brady."

"Don't be hasty, Miss Kelly." ... we plan our own ..., but those two would be at each other's throats in six months. ... to make the world over. It's a part of our punishment. Can't seem to understand that nature's the boss. Sullivan there would like to rake in all the coin and call new dividends. You know how Teresa would like that. She mightn't get as much as he has."

"If she loves him she would let him ..."

"Would she? Teresa's as full of character as a bubble is of meat."

"Yes, but when you care for a person you give them everything. I would."

"Little innocent! The Givers—they're one type of lovers; the takers—they're the other brand. Teresa belong there. She's a taker. They get the best of life ... Look ... now."

She was leaning with her long, tapering arms on the table.

Pat reached over, a reckless smile on his face, and pulled a yellow rose from a vase on a corner of the table. She opened her hand for it. He looked down at her, laughed and thrust the bud in his pocket. She shrugged her shoulders and motioned for him to pull back her chair.

"Party's over; grab a sandwich, wife; save on our breakfast." He moved my chair and waited while I picked up my place card and the two little dolls dressed as bride and groom that were favors at each place. I knew June and Ma would go into raptures over them and I wanted them anyway, they were so cute.

"You baby," Jack laughed. "I bet your room is packed with nonsense."

"I don't often go to a million dollar party where they give real dolls away."

Ray Gordon, one of the men Jack had introduced, came over and asked me for a dance. When it was finished the musicians played "Dear Old Pal of Mine." Music stirred me as nothing else in the world.

As I listened now a throng of memories trouped before me.

Out of it, Mary!" Pat stood before me, his hands extended. He pulled me gayly to my feet and raced me to the side of the long room. "Quicker, quicker!" His deep voice, his strong arms—I felt as though I were turning into rhythm. "Sing it, Mary! Can you ... your hand—ah, dear old pal of mine."

He pressed something into it, soft hot—the yellow rose—the one he had refused to Teresa. Joy like a tossing sea swept over me.

"If I phone will you answer this time? Tomorrow at 7?"

Pat's ... voice was at my ear; the words flung hurriedly as I stood at the door waiting for Nell, echoed like a song as I got into the tonneau of Tram's car.

"Had a great time, old thing, didn't you? Made the hit of the century. Jack's gone mad over you. Asked you to Gloucester. Old Lady Baldwin will turn green at the lips when she finds you there. You've done me proud, Mary. Your coming out was a great success."

The rose pressed in my hand; those singing words in my ear—what do I care for Jack Mahoney and his gay flippancy? Even the joyous prospect of the trip gave way before the mounting fire of gladness that swept over me as I felt that little soft bud in my fingers.

Big Station In Sweden

Sweden is taking the advice of Ernst F. W. Alexanderson, its distinguished native, in deciding to erect a high-power trans-Atlantic radio station at once. Alexanderson, in a recent interview in a Stockholm newspaper, told his fellow-countrymen that only a few more trans-Atlantic stations could be opened, as the available wavelengths were nearly all in use, and advised them to take time by the forelock before it was too late. The 2000 kilowatt station which will be erected at Gothenburg, on the west coast of Sweden, will use the alternators perfected by Alexanderson.

"Use Sylpho-Nathol for tired, hot feet"

"This is the first Summer in years that I ... comfort ... dread hot weather ... My feet would swell, then get so hot ... I ache dreadfully.

I tried all sorts of things without relief until Betty Mills told me about Sylpho-Nathol.

"You just use Sylpho-Nathol—and see,' she said, and went on to explain how wonderful she had found it.

"I bought a bottle of Sylpho Nathol right away. Following the directions, I poured a tablespoonful into a gallon of warm water and put both feet in the clean pearly-gray solution which it made. My, how good it felt—how it cooled and soothed my feet!

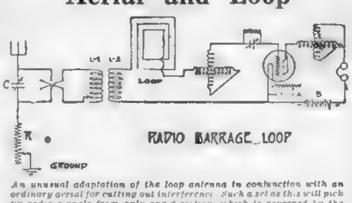

"Since then, I've used Sylpho-Nathol as a regular daily, hot-weather foot bath. It has never failed."

This is just one of the many uses to which Sylpho-Nathol is being put. For making cleansing-water that destroys the germs which breed in dust and dirt; as a safe and sure way of banishing unpleasant odors; as a dependable household antiseptic — Sylpho-Nathol meets the most exacting requirements.

Sylpho-Nathol is easy to prepare. A tablespoonful in a gallon of warm water makes a clean smelling, germ-destroying solution that is ready for immediate use.

Though four and one-half times stronger than carbolic acid, it is as safe to have about as a piece of soap. Your druggist or grocer has Sylpho-Nathol in four handy sizes, 15c, 35c, 65c and $1.25. If he hasn't it he can get it easily. Just ask for it by the name—"Sylpho-Nathol."

Radio Set Using Both Aerial and Loop

An unusual adaptation of the loop antenna in conjunction with an ordinary aerial for cutting out interference. Such a set as this will pick up radio signals from only one direction, which is governed by the direction of the loop. A variable resistance is used in the antenna circuit (R), a reversing switch (S) is used to vary the direction of the current in the coupling (L-1 and L-2), and a tuning condenser (C) is used in the primary.

AN unusual radio receiver, using both loop and aerial, has been perfected by Ernst F. W. Alexanderson, the inventor of the Alexanderson alternator, and a leading radio engineer.

The barrage loop system, as it is known, is used to cut out interference of all kinds. The loop in this system is much more highly directional than the ordinary loop. Besides being more selective, the barrage loop brings in louder signals than the plain loop, although not so loud as with aerial alone.

The loop that is used with this set must be tuned. For 360-meter reception twelve turns of No. 18 bell wire, spaced about half an inch apart, on a frame three or four feet square, with opportunity for varying length of wire may be used.

It is necessary to have the energy picked up by the aerial about equal to that picked up by the loop, and a variable resistance is accordingly used in series in the aerial circuit.

Signals intercepted by the aerial are carried through the primary in one direction, through the secondary in the opposite direction, and thus around the loop. These signals from the aerial will either reinforce, or counteract the signals intercepted by the loop, secondary in the opposite direction, of the current from the aerial.

The change-over switch is inserted in order that the direction of the current from the aerial will be the same as that from the loop so that the two will reinforce each other.

The receiver is made selective by be the same as that from the loop, picked up by the aerial only those which are desired are reinforced by the loop.

Answers to Radio Fans

E. Y., Roxbury.—Electric light socket plug antennas are not always successful with crystal sets. There seems to be no very satisfactory method of installing an indoor antenna for crystal sets. If you wish to experiment, however, try stringing a wire around the moulding of your largest room two or three times.

L. M. M., Framingham.—There is no convenient way to fit a loose coupler with a tickler coil. An easier way to make a simple VT set regenerative is to put a variometer in series in the plate circuit.

G. A. L., Boston.—Ground leads should be as short as possible, both from the set and the lightning protector. Steam or hot-water radiators generally make excellent ground, or you may use a gas pipe provided a wire is used to carry the current around the gas meter.

D. F. R., Newton.—Your receiver may have been made defective by dropping on the floor which has spoiled its delicate adjustment. A scratching sound seems to indicate a poor connection somewhere.

Gouraud's Oriental Cream

THE STIFF UPPER LIP

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

WHO is there who has never cried out from the depths of misery, exclaiming bitterly that his sufferings were too great to bear?

Who is there who has never faced what seemed to be unendurable? Who is there who has not known terror, discouragement, utter desperation at the thought of affliction which seemed beyond human endurance?

There's no question that we mortals have in us enough of the divine to carry us on wings of spirit past all the barriers of the flesh.

"As thy day is, so thy strength is," says the Book of Books. And even the most irreverent have found that cruel occasion proves this true. The spirit performs miracles when miracles are needed. The woman who has not walked a step for twenty years may rise and run from a burning building. Florence Nightingale performed miracles of endurance in the Crimea. Doctors and nurses go on working way past the fatigue point, and they come to no harm even though they go for days without sleep and with inadequate food.

We have no idea and no way of measuring the things of which we are capable when pressed. When we contemplate difficulty we estimate our fitness to meet it in terms of our ordinary day. We never consider our vast reservoir of reserves. We merely think of ordinary procedure and of how we sigh and faint and struggle at the least sign of difficulty when things are going along their regular courses.

"Most of our ills we have cured;
The sharpest we still have survived.
But what tortures of fear we endured
From the troubles which—never arrived."

This is true, and is safe as a slogan and motto, for most of our most cruelly anticipated woes never do arrive—but when they do—our strength is great enough to meet them.

A friend of mine was the victim of a cruel and lying bit of slander which was so deeply grounded by the time she heard of it that there was practically no way to stop its course. In her desperation she wanted to run away. There was no way of fighting, no way of denying. All she could do was hold her head high, act as usual and hope that by her simple honesty and courage the innocence of her life would assert itself to those who had heard the cruel lies about her.

"I can't do it!" she cried.

But she did do it. And it worked. Truth prevailed. Simple dignity made itself felt as innocence. Denial and flight might have seemed like protests of guilt. But the quiet silence which seemed too much to compass, established the truth.

The dearest, bravest old man I know had to undergo an operation recently. The doctors said it would take twenty minutes and that it would be best to give nothing more than a local anaesthetic. For an hour and a half those doctors probed a wound in the throat while the dear victim lay there brave and quiet. He bore torture which the physician in charge told me was almost inconceivable.

"I'd have hated to stand that agony without an anaesthetic," said the surgeon. "We offered him gas finally—but he knew it would make things harder for us and lessen his chances of coming through and back to the daughter who loves him. So he stood it all without the least whimper."

Unendurable pain! But the brave father stood it. And I believe all of us can find strength like his to bear the "unendurable" and so to fortify our characters and to make ourselves able to rise in spirit, triumph in soul and survive in the arena of life.

How Bobbed Hair Girl Solved Curling Problem

By Using Pure Liquid Silmerine

"My worries began after having my hair bobbed. I simply could not keep it in curl, especially on damp days. After reading about Liquid Silmerine ... I decided to give it a trial. I applied it according to directions and then put my hair up and left it over night. I was so delighted with the curls in the morning and best of all, they stay nice all day, regardless of the weather. When my hair gets straight again, ... liquid Silmerine."

... obtainable at any drug or department store, ... is just splendid for keeping any hair beautiful, wavy, curly and glossy.

Etiquette Problem Answer

A pianist is particularly prone to this form of discourtesy from assembled guests who have urged her to play for them. They would not talk and laugh if the performer were a vocalist.

CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY OF M. L. DRAKE

Friends and associates of M. L. Drake, of the retail furniture firm of Drake & Hersey, gathered at the Copley-Plaza Hotel Thursday night at an informal dinner and reception celebrating the fiftieth birthday of Mr. Drake.

A leather auto lunch case was presented Mr. Drake by his employes. The affair was a complete surprise, invitations having been issued to the supposed birthday anniversary of Charles Levine, the manufacturer.

A program of songs and recitations was presented. An original poem dedicated to the occasion was read by Miss Annie June Johnson, a member of the Drake & Hersey personnel.

Largest Evening Circulation in New England—August 25, 1922

The East Boston tunnel, from Maverick square under the harbor to the State House, opened in 1904, cost $3,336,000.

Public Care of Babies

Each Child Is a Contribution to the State, and the State Should Mind It When Mother Is at Work

We have received the following letter:

Knowing the wonderful results the Boston American has brought about for the working people by its suggestions, I, therefore, would be pleased to know whether the Boston American could possibly suggest some way of bringing about ideas to establish a "Babies' Home" (for mothers who are obliged to work)? If such may be obtained, it would be appreciated.

Many cities, and especially many department stores in many cities, have such an institution as the writer of the above letter suggests. Indeed, every city ought to be equipped with such a convenience. It should be as omnipresent as the public school, itself. It is just as necessary. It should not be made a private enterprise; it should be a public function.

In addition to the other difficulties and hazards of presenting children to the country, a mother ought not to be made a slave for her children. Since each child is a contribution to the State, the State ought to take some care of the children when the mother needs a little freedom.

In Russia—dark, savage, terrible Russia—they do things differently. They take care of the children all day for the mothers; feed them; teach them. The State takes the children early in the morning; gives the children their breakfast, teaches them all day, gives them their lunch and their dinner, and then when it is time for the parents to come home from their work delivers them back to their parents so that they may enjoy their society during the evening. Next morning the State takes them again so that the parents have all the joy of parenthood and are relieved of most of its burdens.

We may not want to go as far as the Russians have gone, but our progress ought to be greater than it has been in that direction.

Why Do We Address Letters Backward?

We do a lot of curious things, indeed a lot of silly things, simply because we and our ancestors have always done them.

We sew useless buttons on our coat sleeves, we use pounds and ounces instead of the decimal system, and we have twelve irregular months in the year instead of thirteen regular ones.

One of the strangest irrational things that we keep on doing is the addressing of our letters backward.

For instance, we say:

George W. Mutt,
304 North Broadway,
Yonkers, New York.

As that envelope goes through the mail it is all tail-end first.

It is New York the postoffice clerk first looks for. Second, it is Yonkers. Third, it is Broadway. Fourth, it is North. Fifth, it is 304. And sixth and last, it is George W. Mutt.

Why do we do this?

"Casey" Still at Bat

Others may falter, but "Casey" continues to see the veteran through.

In the last fiscal year the Knights of Columbus spent $2,700,000 on educational and hospitalization work for ex-service men; $900,000 was spent on welfare work in 362 hospitals; $178,336 on educating 300 veterans in colleges; $954,891 on free evening technical schools for war veterans, and $308,578 for other courses for veterans.

The same generous program is to be maintained during the next twelve months.

New Policies for China

Sun Yat Sen, Candidate for Chief Magistracy of the Republic, Backed by Military Leader

Sun Yat Sen, candidate for the Chief Magistracy of the New Republic of China, has most unexpectedly obtained the support for his public policies of the chief military figure of China. He is the man whose military genius led to Sun Yat Sen's overthrow when he was the President of the Southern Chinese Republic.

Sun Yat Sen's policies are now being endorsed and will probably be put into effect.

They are interesting policies. They include, as indeed they ought, the policy of freedom from foreign influence in the Chinese government which would keep the Chinese people "disnevered, belligerent, discordant" and the helpless prey of the foreign exploiters who rob them. He would establish self-government and abolish military government in the provinces, and would replace the military governorships there by converting these organizations into an army to develop the industrial and agricultural resources, turning the sword into a plowshare and a hoe, and drafting executive abilities of the officers for the organization of industry.

It is a most interesting scheme. This endorsement by the military leader of such a scheme is also of more than passing interest.

United States Unprotected

Army Air Service Official Claims Aviation Force, as First Line of Defence, Needs 2,400 Planes

Brigadier-General Mitchell, assistant chief of the United States Air Service, declares that traveling in the air will soon be reduced to six cents per mile per person.

If this is so, then aeroplane traveling will be about as cheap as traveling in an auto and of course very much less expensive for the government, which has to maintain the roads that are destroyed by the traffic.

But he also said something very interesting:

Every nation now regards aviation as a first line of defence and in this respect the United States is not well protected. I would call an adequate air force for this country one that gave 600 planes on the Atlantic, 600 on the Pacific and 1,200 in the interior. That would require a personnel of 40,000 and the United States today has less than 400 flying officers.

It was an American who invented the aeroplane. America developed it, and yet we are the most backward of all the great nations of taking advantage of the commerce and defence which this new achievement has offered to us.

Broad-Minded

Editor Boston American:

Having heard so much criticism of late relative to woman's attire, I can't help but wail: "It makes me tired."

This is a free country, and everyone has a right to dress as they please. If one wishes to wear ankle length dresses and cover their ears, well and good. But if one wishes to wear short skirts, with their ears uncovered, why not? I hope I am broad-minded enough for that.

But it really makes my blood boil (Northern) blood, by the way, of which I am glad and proud) to hear someone like "Southerner" insinuate that if one bobs their hair or wears "knickers" that all men point their fingers in scorn at them. That is untrue and absurd. Come on, you husbands, brothers and sweethearts of us poor, maligned flappers, and tell the world we are just as respectable as when we allowed our ears to show.

Wants Republicans Defeated

Editor Boston American:

The Republicans should be defeated in this State, as they are the cause of unemployment and strikes and all the industrial troubles of the working people. They represent a conservative idea which is fatal to radical working people. The church has been on the side of the Republicans instead of the radicals, and the working people have had wages reduced and all kinds of trouble. Big efforts should be made to defeat Republicans for all offices in the State, as they are tyrants to working people and makers of poverty and misery, they represent only bondholders.

HENRY CUNNINGHAM.

For Self-Determination

Editor Boston America:

Yes, let us give Mrs. Drew credit for her grit and backbone in giving her views relative to the Boland-Bruga memorial services and the other alleged misuse of the American flag. But as a citizen of the United Sates, I say the American flag had a perfect right to cover the coffins in those ceremonies beside the Irish flag, as those men died for self-determination, one of the alleged reasons why this country was supposed to be fighting for during the late war, that is a Republic in Ireland. This country allowed the Irish flag to fly behind the Stars and Stripes in many a battle in the Civil War, when the North was fighting for the unification of this country and when England was siding with the South to help to destroy unity as she has succeeded "temporarily" in doing today in Ireland.

JAMES J. McCARTHY.

Help Ireland

Editor Boston American:

Why shouldn't America help Ireland to have a republic like ours? It is very poor judgment for any person, especially one that has read American history, to compare the war of the North and South of America to the war they are having in Ireland. And why say that Great Britain and America served under the one God, one law, divine democracy and universal brotherhood?

If Great Britain could have beat this country at the time of the Revolutionary War, we would never have had a republic. We would be swearing allegiance to the King today, but, thank God, George Washington and the Minute Men were there.

M. T. McCARTHY.

Not a Member

Editor Boston American:

My attention has been called to an article appearing in your edition of August 22, in which you have declared the man Vanderhew, who recently was indicted for abducting Irene Wakefield, to be a spiritualist and a leader of this camp. Inasmuch as these grounds are owned and controlled by the New England Spiritualist Camp Meeting Association and that Vanderhew is not a member of the association, nor a spiritualist, and when he applied for membership in the camp meeting association was refused admission, we believe we have valid grounds for objecting to the said publication.

IN TRYING TO INJURE OTHERS YOU INJURE YOURSELF

By Winifred Black

THE woman down the street is building a spite fence.

She's had a quarrel with her neighbor and the neighbor got the better of the argument, so the woman is building a high fence to spoil the view from the brand-new dining room of her neighbor.

And she's going to paint it a hideous staring blue—that's because the neighbor's dining room is done in soft green and the fence will take all the color out of the green and make it look faded and characterless.

And she's awfully pleased about it—the woman down the street. She laughs every time she thinks of it—such a mean, spiteful, triumphant little laugh —I hate to hear it!

Poor thing, what a lot of miserable hours she is building for herself—the woman down the street. The spite fence won't hurt a thing of the neighbor's except the view.

But it will build a fence of hatred and envy and spite between the woman down the street and everything that is beautiful and serene and joyous in life.

She's building a spite fence in her own mind—poor thing! And when she gets ready to tear it down, she'll find that she will have to tear a part of her own heart out with it.

I know a woman who has a spite fence built in her heart against every other woman who is young and pretty, or attractive in any way.

If you're old or ugly or unattractive, if you're cross-eyed or stoop-shouldered or freckled-faced, this particular woman will be perfectly charming to you. There is nothing she can do that will be too much trouble. She will give you presents and call you pet names and invite you to luncheon, dinner and tea —but, get your eyes straightened, clear your skin, fall heir to some money and some becoming new gowns—forget my fancy!

The woman with the spite fence will begin to hate you.

Envy, malice, jealousy, spite—what a hateful quartet of malignant evils! If I found one of them growing up to have influence in my life, I would tear it up by the roots, if I had to tear my soul into shreds to do it.

Look, the woman on the other side of the spite fence is planting a lovely climbing rose on her side.

In a few months it will be a mass of gorgeous flowers. By next Summer the blue wall will not be blue to her at all, it will be simply a background for something fresh and joyous and beautiful.

I must try to meet that woman and know her—she must be very, very wise.

If This Is Your Birthday

You Are LUCKY

PEOPLE born this date are known to be both enthusiastic and good natured. They are keen, critical and analytical, but at the same time generous in word and deed and just as lovable as they are affectionate.

It today is your birthday, however, you should cultivate a little more foresight than you are naturally gifted with, for you are reckless and improvident where money is concerned and you need all the equipment money brings for the full development of your talents.

Today is one of good omen for the disposal of merchandise and real property, but of less favorable outlook for the signing of documents and contracts.

A child born today will be generous and joyous in disposition, diligent but spendthrift.

Famous persons born this day:

Bret Harte, poet and author.

John Leverett, president of Harvard University.

Allan Pinkerton, detective.

ARE YOU LAX WITH YOUR CHILDREN ABOUT EDUCATION?

Undoubtedly, since you have reached maturity, you have wished that your parents had insisted on your attending school for a longer period, or that they had compelled you to practice enough to become proficient in some accomplishment.

Despite this fact, as a parent, you allow your own child to neglect opportunities or slight the work necessary to a high degree of knowledge.

Some day your children will blame you for not insisting on worthwhile results of study.

Of course, it necessitates a lot of "sticktoitiveness" on your part to keep after it, day in and day out relentlessly.

You will have a lot of disagreements with your youngsters.

You will, that is, if you do not make them understand what you mean when you start out to get obedience.

You are going to be sorely tempted to throw up the job of policeman of study and practice periods; don't do it—but persevere.

SEEN AND HEARD

MOTORISTS have become accustomed to the "For Sale" sign that adores the main highways and look upon the same as an everyday sight. One placard that causes more than usual interest is posted at the Lynn Area Field beyond the Point of Pines bridge, Revere. "Bear Cubs for Sale," on the poster, and judging from the number of black youngsters that gambol about the cage the management is sincere in its offer.

Lying high and dry on a steging on a section of the beach at Weymouth, where it is claimed the Pilgrim Fathers once landed is a small passenger steamer, evidently not of recent origin. A sign on the craft reads as if it were explanatory of the beaching, saying: "Safety First: Avoid Accidents. U. S. Steamboat Inspection Service."

Portsmouth, N. H., boasts a combination of Colonial antiquities it would be hard to beat. There is an old mansion which retains the lightning rods put up by the famous Benjamin Franklin in person, while on the same street, from historic St. John's Church, the pleasant peals of a bell of Paul Revere's handiwork summon the faithful to worship.

DR. S. F. A. PICKERING, Portsmouth, N. H., police commissioner, has a Summer home at Little Boar's Head, first made famous by the poet Whittier and later by Studebaker, the late "automobile king." At this place Dr. Pickering has this year raised corn which may have been last previously planted by the Indians in Colonial days, for he reports finding the seed in a sealed jar in an old mound believed to be of Indian origin.

They tell this about JUDGE SAMUEL P. ABBOTT who presides over the destinies of the Waltham District Court, embracing Waltham, Watertown and Weston. An officer was testifying. Before going on the stand, he had been chewing tobacco and had forgotten to drop it in a cuspidor. The Judge announced a recess, retired to his room and summoned the officer. Expecting to get reprimanded, the officer went. "Did I see you chewing tobacco on the witness stand?" demanded the Judge. "Yes, your honor," was the reply. "Have you got any more tobacco?" "Yes, your honor." "Then give me a chew."

Fishermen report large numbers of slim young gulls just beginning to come into Boston and other nearby harbors, piloted by their elders, from nesting rocks well to the north. The young gulls can be told by their graceful movements, beside which those of the mature birds appear clumsy.

Those "Flapper" hats—turned up in front and back—despite the fact that they are the most popular ever let loose in feminine America, are not so popular with the millinery manufacturer. "There's no trimming on them," explains a local millinery authority. "And trimming is one item that the manufacturers plan to make a generous margin of profit on."

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON USEFUL KNOWLEDGE

By Garrett P. Serviss

WHAT an interesting thing it is to measure the height of a distant mountain while sitting quietly on a porch, provided only with a lead pencil and a footrule for instruments and a trifling knowledge of trigonometry for calculating purposes. How simple a thing may seem magical to those who don't know the trick! This morning I sat thus on a hotel porch and admired a distant, blue, magnificently shaped mountain. I asked a native of the region how high that mountain was; he didn't know, never had heard tell how high it was. How far away was it? He reckoned it might be between twenty and thirty mile. A railroad chart showed that the distance was about twenty miles in an air line.

"Now," said I to an interested companion, "we'll find out for ourselves how high that mountain is. It is certainly a bit of information worth the trouble of making a few figures."

"How are you going to do it when you've got no surveying instrument?"

"This pencil and footrule will do the work well enough for our purpose. Observe that the pencil is one-quarter of an inch thick. Now I hold it horizontally and move it away from my eye until it hides the mountain from the horizon line to the summit. The intervening country being practically level helps us. When the pencil covers the mountain I find that it is fifteen inches from my eye. The distance of the mountain, as the chart shows, is twenty miles.

"Very well, then, we have this proportion: As 15 inches is to 1, inch, so is 20 miles to the height of the mountain, which we will call X. Solving the proportion we find that 60 X equals 20 miles, so that X must equal 20-60, or one-third of a mile, i. e., 1,760 feet, which is therefore the height of the mountain.

"We did not have formally to employ trigonometry at all. Simple arithmetic sufficed. We only had to know that the apparent height of an object varies inversely with the distance. A quarter of an inch at a distance of 15 inches has angular altitude the same as that of a mountain 1,760 feet high, but 84,480 times 15 inches distant. In each case the distance is 60 times the height, 60×¼ inch being 15 inches, and 60×1,760 feet being 20 miles.

"So many people never remember, or never apply, any of the elementary mathematics that they learned in school to anything in practical life except figuring grocers' and dressmakers' bills, the price of stocks and the cost of keeping up appearances. Without knowing it, they have in their possession, only waiting to be used, a key that will unlock the gate of a world of intellectual pleasures."

The simple method above described may often be of the greatest practical value in furnishing information imperatively needed to enable one to calculate the existing circumstances to be had. It furnishes much entertainment, too. It is an easy matter to estimate the distance as the magnitude of an object. The two are interconvertible. Knowing one you can ascertain the other. Often it is convenient to proceed by a trigonometrical method. Here the tangent of the angle subtended by the distant objects is the key. It is a humble little accomplishment to learn how to estimate angles.

—Medbury Says—

Lots of Millionaires Are Now Roughing It at the Big Summer Hotels

Vacation time is not yet over, "roughing it" this Summer at the close to nature so they take their valets and go to a mountain resort.

Most of them love exercise and when they want to work up a good "sweat" they play a game of dominoes.

One millionaire felt ambitious and decided that a good long hike would do him good. So he sent his valet out to take it for him.

The valet took five thousand dollars of his master's money with him so that his master would feel better when he came back.

This rich guy loved the open. He slept right outside and all he had between him and the ground was a bed.

A mosquito bit this millionaire during the night and died the next morning. He couldn't stand rich food.

Another wealthy bird loved to hunt. He used to go down to the butcher shop every morning and cut his own steaks.

He got a thrill of having it cooked in the open air so he ordered the chef to leave the kitchen window up while he was broiling it.

He loved the simple country life and sometimes he'd go all day without shaving.

and lots of millionaires are big hotels. They want to get limousine, six trunks and two

He'd send his valet out of the room and dress himself in the morning so he could work up an appetite for breakfast.

Then he'd lie down till lunch time with nothing around him but the house.

He got a great tan from sticking his head out of the living room window.

He got the rest of his body brown as a berry by sitting in front of the open fire place in a bathing suit.

Then he'd have his valet go and get under a cold shower for him.

When he went home he was proud of his bruises, but he didn't tell his friends that he got them from being rubbed with a turkish towel.

After a month in the country he comes back to the city ready to get down to another year of loafing.

The average millionaire loves the great out-of-doors provided there's a large house in the middle of it.

WAVERLY GIRL SEEKS PET DOG LOST IN CITY

A wandering canine which attracted attention on Marlboro street yesterday belongs to Miss Rita Aborn of No. 11 Harriet avenue, Waverly.

The dog, a tiny brown and white terrier, was seen meandering disconsolately up and down, showing every indication of looking for his owner.

"I'm sure it was my pet," Miss Aborn told the Boston American. The description fits exactly. My little dog got lost in the maze of the downtown streets Tuesday. As soon as I read about the dog found wandering on Arlington street I went to the Back Bay and searched for hours, but I couldn't find him.

"I'm going there again. If anybody should happen to find the dog I would be grateful if it were called to my attention."

LAY TRAIN WRECK TO BROKEN RAIL

Newport, Aug. 25.—The wreck on the New Haven road in which six were injured may have been caused by the breaking of the rail by the weight and force of the tender which carried 10,000 gallons of water, as the speeding engine attempted to negotiate a sharp curve. This theory was offered here today by experts investigating the accident.

The water in the tender swashed back and forth against its sides as the train sped along. The force of the water against one side of the tender as the train took the curve may have caused the rail on that side to split.

As the rail snapped, it is assumed, the tender left the track, followed by the coaches.

CAN BUILD SOUTH BOSTON GAS TANK

The Meisel Manufacturing Company was today authorized by State Fire Marshal George C. Neal to erect a gas tank capable of holding 8,000 barrels of lubricating oil at No. 66 Locust street, South Boston.

PARLEY IN RAIL STRIKE IS BROKEN UP

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 25.—Attempts to end the rail shopmen's strike by separate settlements with individual roads failed today and conferences were broken off.

Daniel Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, head of the committee of executives, who Wednesday decided to continue negotiations with the mediating brotherhood chiefs to see if separate settlements were possible, and other rail heads prepared to leave the city.

In announcing the breaking off of negotiations, David Williams, head of the eastern strike committee, said nothing else could have happened.

"If they'll quit fussing around we'll beat these fellows."

The break came after the brotherhood leaders, who have maintained the strike must end because the public demanded it, had spent two hours today with executives representing about thirty per cent of the country's mileage.

These negotiations looking toward individual settlements began Wednesday night, after the association of railway executives as a whole rejected any proposal involving a surrender on the seniority question.

Expect New Coal Parley Within Week

New Bombings Are Reported in Rail Strike

Chicago, Aug. 25.—The railroad strike reached the end of its eighth week today to the accompaniment of bomb explosions and extensive violence.

Bombings followed a night of rail greasing and the cutting of air hose at Roodhouse, Ill., division point on the Chicago & Alton. Two explosions occurred near the C. & A. roundhouse and another bomb burst near a hotel where railroad workers were quartered. The town was thrown into darkness shortly before the bombs were set off.

Passengers on a train out of Roodhouse during the disturbance said many shots were fired.

Officials of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad investigated an attempt to dynamite a railroad bridge near Spanish Lake, Mo., 17 miles from St. Louis. Although the explosion was terrific, little damage was reported.

At Jacksonville, Fla., the home of J. A. Williams, foreman in the Seaboard Air Line Railroad shops and a member of the City Council, was dynamited.

Governor McCray of Indiana asked Federal authorities to intercede in strike disorders at Garrett, Ind., where workmen were threatened and their homes painted yellow and where bombs were discovered.

Movie Man Kisses Everybody; He's in the Psycho Now

New York, Aug. 25.—A mania for kissing which he suddenly developed at Park avenue and Forty-seventh street today landed Garland R. Carper, a handsome six-foot moving picture actor, in the psychopathic ward at Bellevue.

Carper, accompanied by his sister-in-law, Miss Josie Kirk, was riding through Park avenue in the actor's limousine. Suddenly Carper ordered the chauffeur to stop.

Carper leaped out and gave a military salute to a policeman. He was about to plant a kiss on the policeman's cheek when Miss Kirk interfered.

Carper seized her in his arms and kissed her. The chauffeur intervened and he got kissed. Other policemen came up and the actor was overpowered.

Friend of Toilers

HELEN FRICK.

Daughter of late steel magnate, who is believed to be responsible, in a large measure, for the wage increase just given employes of the United States Steel mills. She has long been known as the friend of the poor. On her father's death she became a dominant factor in the business.

HELEN FRICK BOOSTS PAY IN STEEL MILLS

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 25.—Steel circles are still stunned from the action of Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation, in ordering a 20% increase in wages of day laborers in the steel mills and the establishment of "Cleveland settlement" wages in subsidiary coal and coke mines.

Numerous reasons are assigned for Judge Gary's actions. One is that he is becoming resentful at being regarded as the principal "labor baiter" in the United States. Another is that the sacred he-precincts of the steel trust have been invaded by the spectre of petticoat domination in the form of the daughter of the late Henry C. Frick.

Miss Frick, since her father's death, has become the possessor of a great block of stock in the United States Steel Corporation, and is now believed to be the dominating figure in the H. C. Frick Coke Company.

In the formerly non-union mines of this company, in Fayette County, the wage scale, slightly higher than the Cleveland settlement of the bituminous coal strike, has just been posted.

Compared to the increases in the Frick coke regions, as high in some instances as 65 per cent., Judge Gary's 20 per cent. increases pales.

BABY BADLY HURT IN FALL FROM WINDOW

Two-year-old Helen Plunkett, daughter of Mrs. Mary Plunkett, of No. 37 Myrtle street, Charlestown, fell from a second story window at her home today, sustaining severe injuries.

They were arrested by railroad detectives while crossing the tracks to get to the seashore, as a result of a crusade started since the railroad strike.

Ten were fined $5 each and the other cases either dismissed or placed on file.

In the same court Francis R. Hennessey of No. 13 Trow street, Dorchester was fined $10 for keeping barking dogs, and Alice Sloan of Lorna road, was fined $10 for keeping a dangerous dog. Both appealed and were held in $100 without surety.

William H. Parker of No. 102 Rossetta street, Dorchester, was ordered to pay $100 toward the support of his wife Cecelia and their two minor children. Parker, who was charged with non-support, appealed and was held in $300.

BULL SPENDS LAST DAY ON VISITS

Efforts to tie the bull outside the city hall were made today by Mayor Curley with indifferent success.

The bull, a handsome animal, was presented to the mayor, in behalf of the Volunteers of America, by Clarence W. Barron. Today it was frisky and the cynosure of all eyes. Tomorrow it will be succulent and the delight of all palates. It is destined to play the star role in the barbecue arranged by the Volunteers for the benefit of disabled veterans in various New England hospitals.

Ten thousand persons are expected to attend the barbecue at Lake View Rest Camp, Bridgewater. Among those present will be the mayor, Sherman L. Whipple and Colonel William A. Gaston, who will bury the knife, if not the hatchet, for the occasion; General and Mrs. Clarence R. Edwards, General Charles H. Cole and numerous officials of the American Legion.

One hundred automobiles will convey the veterans from Boston Common.

Quite a Joke on the Two Mothers Wasn't it?

MR. AND MRS. STANLEY S. R. HOLMES

They announced they were going on a vacation and invited their mothers down to the St. John, steamer to see them off. When the mothers arrived they were taken to a stateroom where a minister quickly made Stanley Holmes and Pauline Stockton of Cambridge man and wife.

STAGE WEDDING IN STATEROOM AS SURPRISE

"I always wanted an exciting wedding," said the happy little bride, when the minister had closed his book and the blissful bridegroom had kissed her.

"Well, you surely got it," declared the captain, mopping his brow and beaming good-naturedly.

Miss Pauline M. Stockton and Stanley S. R. Holmes, both of Cambridge, staged a surprise wedding today that would have delighted the heart of a scenario writer. The two young partners of the Holmes Direct Mailing Service, No. 634 Washington street, Cambridge, each told their friends separately that they were going on a vacation to New Brunswick. No one suspected that the two partners planned to take their vacations at the same time.

Both mothers of the couple arrived at the pier of the St. John, New Brunswick, boat. One-half hour before sailing time the bride and bridegroom each led their unsuspecting mothers to the same stateroom, where Rev. Herbert Handel, assistant pastor of Tremont Temple, was waiting. The captain of the steamship, who was the only person taken into the secret by the romantic young couple, chuckled delightedly as he gave away the bride.

Hardly had the ring slipped on the bride's finger when the thundering roar of the warning whistle sounded and the honeymoon ship made ready to sail. Arm in arm two bewildered little mothers hurried from the deck to cry happily on each other's shoulder after the foolish way of mothers at weddings!

George W. Grebenstein, Newton Alderman, Charges Abusive Treatment

George W. Grebenstein, Newton alderman, and former Dartmouth star athlete, today his wife, Maie Grebenstein, in the East Cambridge Superior Court, charging her with cruel and abusive treatment.

"If two people cannot live together happily, then they should live apart," was the only comment Grebenstein would make on his divorce suit.

He admitted it was unusual for a man to allege charges of cruel and abusive treatment against his wife, but not when they were supported by the facts.

Grebenstein says his wife has not lived at his home at No. 288 Craft street, Newton, since the serving of the libel there about two weeks ago.

The couple were married on May 20, 1911, and have lived in Brookline and Newton.

STATE-WIDE SHORTAGE OF SCHOOLS

Despite the enormous program of schoolhouse building in progress, the shortage in this State is so great that ten years of continuous building will be necessary to overcome it, according to the officials of the State Department of Education, who today completed a State-wide investigation of schoolhouse conditions.

At least 40,000 children who attend school in September will suffer the handicap of getting their early training under the double-shift system, which forces the schools to take care of two classes on the same day, and thousands of others may be deprived of a start in education unless the year's program is rushed through to completion by that time.

An enormous shortage will exist, it was said, despite the fact that thirty-eight schoolhouses, with a capacity of nearly 15,000 students, are now being constructed at a cost of $7,000,000, and twenty-nine other schoolhouses, with a capacity of nearly 20,000 pupils, have been authorized at an estimated cost of over $10,000,000.

DADDY YIELDS, BUT LOVE HITS SNAG IN COURT

Another chapter in the love affair of fifteen-year-old Lucia Pelusi and Paul Malullari, of Winchester, was written in Municipal Court today when they were refused a five-day waiver of their marriage license.

The affair of Paul and Lucia began some time ago, much to the annoyance of Rosario and Tony Pelusi, Lucia's parents, who opposed the match.

The pair thereupon eloped. A warrant was obtained, charging Paul with abducting the girl.

Frantic pleading of the girl finally won Paul an interview with Lucia's dad. Paul talked earnestly and so convinced Tony that he was able to support his daughter.

"All right, my son! You may have the light of our life," said Tony. "But you must be good to her. Come! Let us go to the judge and we will get the five day law waived and you shall marry Lucia today."

So they appeared in Municipal Court, but nothing could be done as they all live in Winchester. The judge suggested they go to their home town and maybe the court there would speed the romance to a happy culmination.

Paul lives at No. 46 Cross street and Lucia and her parents live at No. 21 Spruce street, Winchester.

They hope to be married before another day—and they know they'll live happily ever after.

ACTRESS AVERS SHE "HASN'T BEEN ASKED"

New York, Aug. 25.—Is William Faversham soon to marry again?

For weeks his professional acquaintances have anticipated his wedding to Helen Daube, who is with him in "A Marriage Has Been Arranged," in which he is appearing in Keith vaudeville. The report published in a society journal was denied today by Miss Daube, who admitted she would not be averse to the proposal.

"I haven't been asked," she said. "Of course, I would be flattered if he asked me, but Mr. Faversham has no sentimental attachment for me. I do not believe Mr. Faversham would consider marriage with anyone."

The attachment of Faversham for his second wife, Julie Opp, who died in 1921, was well known in theatrical world. She last played with him in a revival of "The Prince and the Pauper," and Miss Daube was a member of that cast. In denying the engagement Miss Daube spoke of Faversham's love for his dead wife and their two sons, William, Jr., and Phillip.

A story that Sam Hardy, playing with Lenore Ulric in "Kiki," has a number of her letters of a more than friendly nature, and that both she and Faversham are attempting to recover the letters also was denied by Miss Daube.

"Sam Hardy and I are friends; nothing more," she insisted. "He has no letters I care anything about."

It was through Mr. Faversham that Miss Daube changed her stage name from Hardin to Helen Daube. She has been a guest at the Faversham country house at Huntington, L. I., and motors with him frequently. Miss Daube is of the statuesque type admired by the actor. Whenever possible he has chosen a female of her type as his leading lady.
